PREFACE

This book is a history of the Class of 1917 at Yale. In it we have tried to collect all that is tangible of the four sunny years which are now ending. We have striven for completeness, but there is much that must be left unsaid. Life at Yale cannot be put on paper. It evades premeditated description. It is earnestly hoped, however, that this volume in after years will quicken the memory and help to bring back many a happy scene of undergraduate days.

It is furthermore hoped that it will serve as one of the links that must bind us together in time to come. Our friendships were only begun at Yale—they should become ever firmer as we grow older, and that faith which we have in one another, in the Class, and in Yale should gain greater depth with maturity.

These, then, are the sole reasons for this book. May they prompt you to keep your secretary informed.

THIS VOLUME IS AFFECTIONATELY DEDICATED

BY THE CLASS

The honor's great; I hesitate--
 Can words tell what I mean?
Can verses sing what Time should bring
 To Nineteen-Seventeen?

Yet let me send to each, a friend,
 This parting hope: I wish
Your ships--a fleet--may always meet
 Good weather, lots of fish.

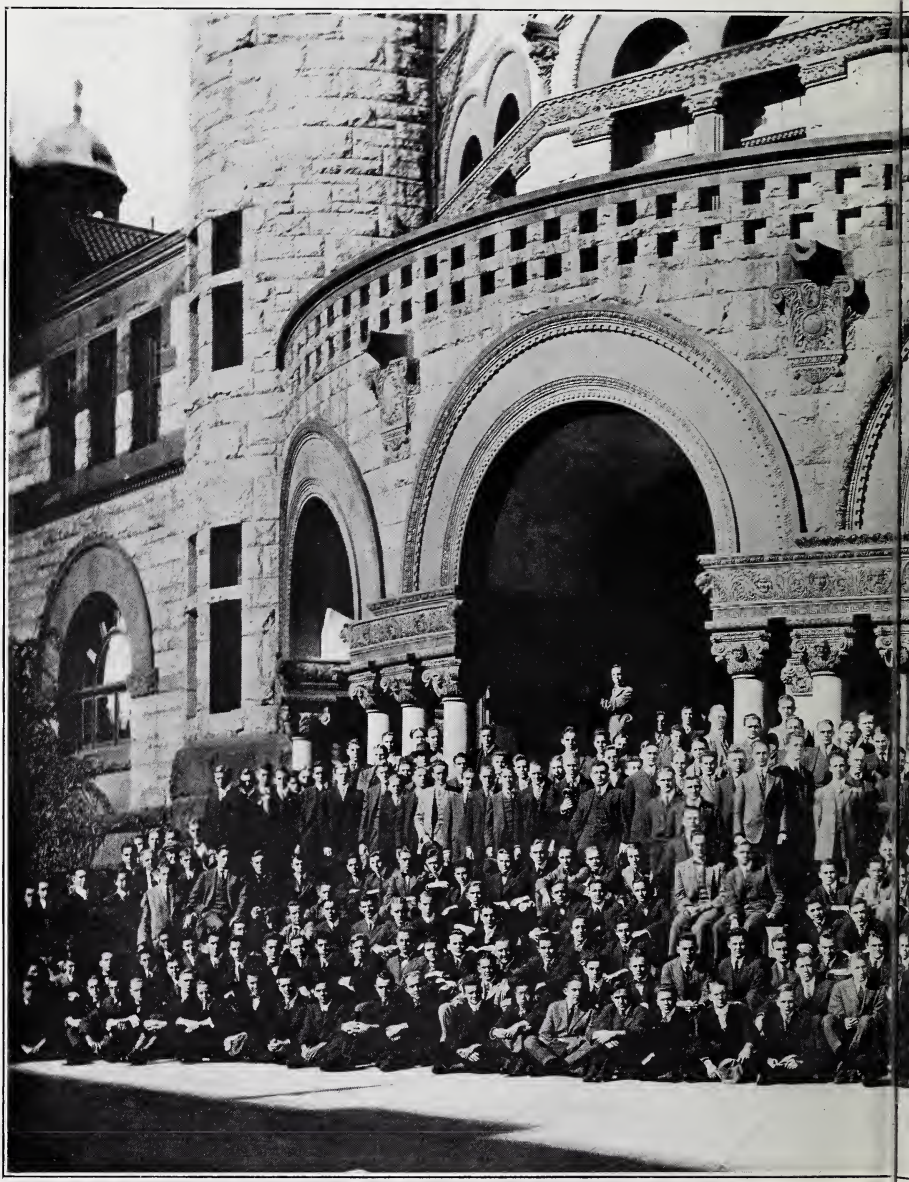

That no storm's force may change your course
 But safe, through reef and shoal,
Your ship held straight, that soon or late,
 You reach your wished-for goal.

More I could say. They cannot stay,
 Sloop, cat-boat, brigantine,
Their pennants fly. Cast-off ! Good-bye
 To Nineteen-Seventeen !

GRINDING

"In Freshman Year we came to Yale," 391 strong, representing 36 states and over 150 schools. Some of us having acquired triumphs at school, walked about complacently; others of conservative character chose to sit and look out through the windows at the passers-by, and try to see where we came and wherefore. Numeral men awed us a great deal, and laden watch chains of upperclassmen tended to attract our innocent eyes. Little did we suspect that in the next few years by accumulating a crowd and calling it a club, we could also chip in and buy our watch chain innumerable decorations. Jack Wiley was perhaps the first most conspicuous Freshman. He walked about with his hat off, biting his thumb at the Freshman conventions and decided to begin with Senior year. Old man Robinson rushed around signing everyone up for calendars and wood, and looked as much like a Freshman as Professor Beers. With such misconceptions we started off our life in New Haven, Embryonic Yalensians, with all the outward courage of a hundred classes before us. We signed a contract with all tradesmen, and paid in advance. We were greatly impressed when told we were to be "rushed"—rushed for what we didn't quite know—but putting on a bold front we assembled in front of Osborn Hall, marched to the center of the Campus, and saw Louie Bennett, the first man in the class to publicly admit it, earn a drawer in the light-weight wrestling. Ray Potter and Maurice Smith defeated the 1916 opponents with ease. Before we realized it we were in the rush. When we came to, we heard cheers that the Freshmen had won. What a victory! We leaped with joy at our triumph, and so great was our feeling of conquest at Yale, that one Freshman was heard to shout, "Down with 1916," and he immediately won the respect of all for his bravery. We slept that night to the tune of "Wake, Freshman, Wake," and appreciated the Sophomores' sympathy in adding to the song something about Freshmen "trembling on their couches lie."

Doing Up the Rock

I am sure we all expected that at the President's reception in Dwight Hall, we were to be personally questioned on all we ever studied at school. How surprised were we to see a mere undergraduate arise and introduce the dignified President with a joke. Yale, as a place of submissiveness to Sophomores and a place of formality, is no more. Kligerman and Rosey made the new boys at home on York Street, in spite of the cold environment of Pierson Hall, and a few jolly Seniors laughed off all class barriers for those in Wright Hall. We had conquered the Sophomores, laughed at the President's jokes and been recognized by all the tradesmen of New Haven. Life, liberty, and the pursuit of knowledge and happiness lay before us. Four of our best years lay open, and God pity the one, if one there is, who regrets them.

Our athletic endeavors started off with great success. We easily won the fall track meet, and Johnny Overton and Treadway won two first places, being the first men to win numerals. Potter, Pumpelly, and Whittlesey proved to be the class strong men, and the football team started off with a victory after a thoroughly satisfactory preliminary season. They hit a snag in Princeton, and lost 30 to 0. Harvard Freshmen beat us also to the tune of 9 to 6. Nevertheless, the team certainly had an excuse for being and developed such men as LeGore, Church, Whittlesey, Waite, Duryee, Metcalf, Bentley, Robinson, Leisenring, Acosta, and Taylor, who were destined to reap athletic prowess before graduation.

Freshmen First

The Way It Used To Be

The winter term was enlivened by Woolley, Simpson, and Sam Walker being elected to the News Board against over thirty competitors. At Violett and Johnny Overton entertained York Street on the cold winter nights by running around the block or diving in snow in pajamas, or by making enough noise in Garland's to entertain all at study. Spence Pumpelly fainted two or three times a week, and Charley Stewart, his accomplice, added many solacers to Spence's long list, who had fallen victims to his great one-act scene. Poor old Leon Dunne became so worked up over one of Spence's trances that he called in three doctors before the tranceur could be brought to consciousness. Life in 242 and 250 centered in Harry Donahoe's front room, where all-night sessions planned the big celebration that was to be held in the spring to celebrate the year.

Our class, led by Dick Richards, set such a grade of scholarship that the Dean had to institute the point system to curb us, and his efforts bid fair to being successful. Phi Beta Kappa qualifications were made more stringent, and in spite of such measures we forced on future classes, our class continued to hatch many Phi Beta Kappa men. O. B. Cunningham, in the din of noise of 242, lay low throughout the year, accumulated marks, and got his start for extra-curriculum pursuits, which were to follow.

On the various Christmas trips we were well represented. Ollie Jennings and Stuffy Spencer went off with the Dramat, and Goody Rhett, Hank Conway, and Bert Olsen played basketball.

Pair-Oared

With all our triumphs, and the changes of institutions that took place our Freshman year, our annals would be incomplete without a brief mention of two Yale figures whom we never got to know, as they passed from our midst during this eventful year. Louis Linder, the faithful guardian of Mory's, never met our class, and Jim Donnelly, the original "friend of the Freshmen," had his last picture taken in our class group. The failure to know these two men, and their legendary accompaniments, is one regret of Freshman year.

Moon Murray captained our hockey team, and Burt Nelson, Frank Blossom, Hen Taylor, and Jack Bierwirth composed the team, ably assisted by Hoke York, who was preparing never to let a puck get by him in years to come.

You Know Him!

In three snowball fights throughout the stormy season, we easily broke the record number of windows, and Harry LeGore threw enough snowballs in these fights to develop his sharpshooting wing, that was to be so reliable in the spring.

We all hired dress suits and made the Freshman Glee Club, in the customary manner. Lit Gould's yodeling, and Jack Richards' able leadership, featured the season, which was very successful. When the trip was announced, there was none left to go, so each taught a friend his part, and sent him to substitute. If I remember rightly, they missed the train, so the concert was never given, and the reputation of the Class maintained.

Whitey Schlaet and Jim Gould helped the swimming team win the championship, and Jack Galt and Asa Brophy won fame at water polo, while T. Wallace wrestled with temptation and defeated all comers on the mat.

With the coming of spring, 1917 really blossomed forth. We had as many men at Savin Rock as any class, and Sam Walker, George Murray, Fred Berger, and T. Wallace spent a night in jail for trying to reverse the boat in "The Red Mill," and changing the scenery.

Under the leadership of LeGore, and the masterful pitching of Art Underwood, the Freshman nine defeated Harvard and Princeton, ably aided by Bush, Conway, Rhett, Thomas, and Armstrong. Treadway led the championship track team to victory, and Ned Davis, Bill Crehore, Overton, Scharff, and Waite won their numerals.

Omega Lambda Chi day was a big one for 1917. Adolph Dick was conspicuous, and we would have easily won the bicycle race had it not been for the fact that Tom Cowles, riding last man for 1917, didn't realize that the Campus is round, and crashed into Vanderbilt Hall instead of turning, and lost us the race through no fault of his.

Hen Coe, Mell Whittlesey, Bunny Harriman, and Olsen rowed on the Freshman eight, which was coxed by Bim Oliver, and all reported a good view of the finish. Thatch Lane, Bill Adams, and Art Crosby rowed a mile and a half in the four-oared race, and easily defeated the Harvard four.

"ALL THE NEWS THAT'S FIT TO PRINT"

Maurice Smith matched wits with 1916 in the Fence Oration, and admitted that as a Class we were incomparable.

Soon after, Meek, Isham, and Richards were added to the News Board, and Stan Burke and Frank Tweddell distinguished themselves in the Commencement play.

One of the outstanding features of this year was the famous celebration on York Street, which took place in the early spring, and according to Toot Farr, who has been seeing these annual occasions for years, was one of the most serious in its efforts to make mirth for the students and discomfort for all New Haven citizens. It seems that under the coaching of Violett and Overton, 242 became sharpshooters with bottles, and one spring night took as their targets passers-by and trolley cars. They had merely to light it off, when all York Street came to their windows, threw all kinds of obscene crockery, porcelain material, and paper, to the anxiety of many hundred people, Freshmen, and members of the faculty. Nineteen Seventeen spirit was aroused and uncontrollable. They had introduced themselves to New Haven in fitting style. 'Tis true the Dean was vexed and pressed his charges to the extent of putting men like Cunningham, Armstrong, and Cooper on probation for their interest in the occasion, but he failed to see that by so doing he curbed their extra-curriculum activities and gave so many more a chance to make a name for 1917 at Savin Rock. Dick Richards and Ellery James led the Class in scholarship, while Whittlesey, LeGore, Waite, and Gould divided athletic honors, by winning numerals in two different sports.

While we were Freshmen, 1914 was graduating. On the Senior Statistics for that year, one Senior advised Freshmen "to eat, drink and work a little, for tomorrow you graduate." Few noticed this advice, probably because "tomorrow" seemed so far off. But now that it is here, too soon, for most of us, perhaps we have only cherished memory, to look back on the first year of Yale as one of youth, innocence, and ignorance, and therefore the happiest, because "almost everything that is great is done in youth"; mirth and innocence are happy masters, while "ignorance is bliss."

Friend Alex:

I thought that I would write and tell you a short history of our class in its Sophomore year. It is not any trouble for me, because I am only sending you a carbon copy. It happened this way: Old George Murray, who is our Class Secretary, came around to me the other day, and said he wanted to have a little talk with me. He gave me a phony cigarette, a Wilbur bud, a pleasant smile, and the information that I was to write the history of our second year. It seems he had found three other weak-minded members who would attend to the other years and he remembered that I had not handed anything in to the Record for some time, so he thought that I must have time to burn. It was an awful blow, but here goes.

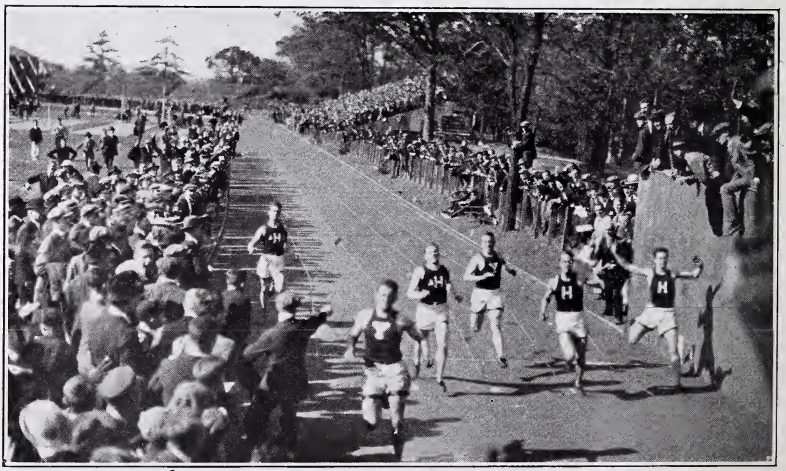

Dope

The night before college opened our Sophomore year—that is, the night of the Freshman rush—about two-thirds of our class suddenly discovered that important business would detain them in New York until the midnight train. Consequently, we were only outnumbered about fifty to one in the scrimmage, and narrowly escaped annihilation. However, next day about two-thirds of the Sophomores spent their entire time telling how many Freshmen they had murdered. But, Alex, I have it on good authority that the infirmary was not crowded at all!

There wasn't much doing, then, for a few weeks, until it came time for the hold-offs. Of course, everybody did exactly what everybody else had supposed they would not do, and it is rumored that Rosey lost one million dollars—on paper. He told me so himself, so it must be true. Be that as it may, the Junior Fraternities got the best crowds they ever have gotten or ever will get, and Calcium Light Night was once more perpetrated on the long-suffering Campus, to the cheers of the few assembled Spearmint-punishers from the Winchester plan. The upperclassmen paraded and scorched their fingers on the torches while they smothered in their robes; the bullet-makers chewed furiously; the Freshmen hooted scornfully from Wright

Hall; two or three people clapped; somebody waved a handkerchief; and altogether it was quite a hell-of-a-note.

Meanwhile those of the class who were terpsichoreanly inclined (if I may coin a word) had been getting fidgety, so we thought it about time to elect the Sophomore German Committee. But just before this the elections from Mory's were sent out, and of course those who had decided to become real club men had to take a few days off to get acclimated to the famous old joint. That duty having been disposed of, the electioneering began. It was fast and furious, and, as the newspapers say, "feeling ran high," but we managed to get by it without any sanguinary details, although rumors of contemplated suicide were frequent. The final elections were: LeGore, Pumpelly, Shepard, Woolley, and Cunningham.

Soon afterwards Old Bert Olsen was chosen to be our competitor for the Football Managership, and he came through like a breeze.

About the middle of November the college invaded Skeeterland to see the annual holocaust at Princeton. There weren't any Samwhites lying around loose down there that year, so the usual and expected thing happened, and the "Nas" had another bad day; 19-14 was the score, and when the smoke cleared away and the New York papers had satisfied themselves that we should not have won, a couple of our classmates were entitled to wear the big white "Y." They were Harry LeGore and Jim Gould. The next week Effie Waite was the only substitute used in the Harvard game, so the season ended up with three letter men in our class. Don't ask me about the Harvard game, Alex; have a heart. Ask me about this year.

A Study in Hats

Next came that wonderful three weeks' Thanksgiving holiday that the faculty always hands out to us. Some of us had such a good time that we did not come back until after Christmas; but naturally that was all right as the authorities never take the trouble to inflict any extra cuts on those who cut immediately before or after holidays.

Speaking of ——— Several of our members made the Glee and Dramat clubs' trips. Bush, Finley, Noyes, Richards, and Fearn were the song-birds, while Stew Clement played about every instrument in the catalogue for the Banjo and Mandolin clubs. Old Stan Burke and Frank Tweddell stalked about the boards all during the Yuletide season, and made a big hit in their respective parts. O. B. Cunningham was elected the future manager of the Dramat, while the musical clubs decided that Ellery James was able to bear a lot of burdens, so they made him the Assistant Manager of their organization.

Lots of things happened during the winter, besides a bunch of snow and wind. After the first storm our class realized forcibly that Biology A1 was far from being a gut course. They did not need any atmospheric proofs about Physics. Then, we were again plunged into a very orgy of elections that lasted a whole week. At the end of that time three more managerial competitors had been chosen. They were Bentley for Track, Estill for Crew, and O'Brien for Baseball. Poli's, the Bij, and the recently Ednanized Globe did a land-office business.

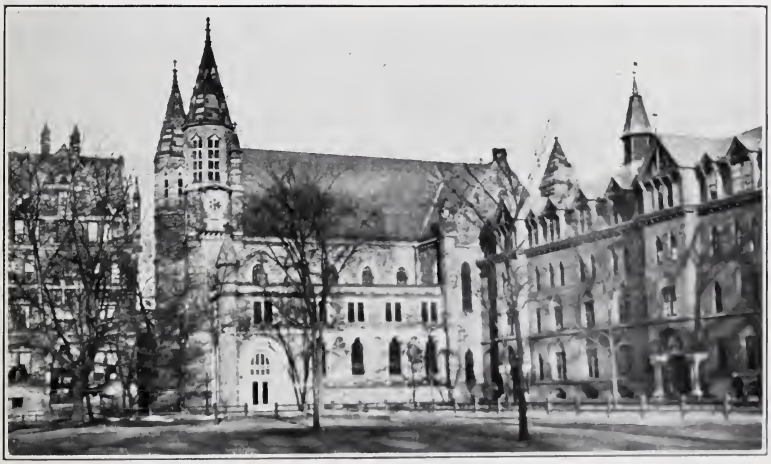

But the greatest of all in the heyday of its power was the far-famed Anderson's Gym. Conveniently fronting on Mory's, it offered a palace of delights two nights every week that was unsurpassed. For a slight pecuniary compensation one might enter its joysome portals and whirl through the mazes of delicious dances with the pick of New Haven's fancy-steppers—always provided one was able to ward off the myriad stags or escape assault and battery at the hands of the fair one's escort, if she had one. And all to the music of a two-pieced orchestra, comprising one drum and one piano. Be it said to the credit of the drummer that no one was ever known to hear the piano or to distinguish what tune was being rendered. It was a wonderful place, Alex, but exists no more. Report has it that it was closed by —— but never mind. I'm not going to say anything about it specifically, but this line is in remembrance of Edgewood Park—its popularity continues to the present day.

Full-fledged Sophomores

One of the big things during the winter was the league basketball race, which, as you will remember, Yale won, after an exciting race. Again our class came to the front with a rush by contributing three men to the team. Olsen was not able to play the whole season on account of sickness, but Conway and Rhett were the two first-string substitutes.

While athletics drew out a preponderance of material from our class, the more serious-minded and cultured also had their innings. Alf Bellinger contributed reams of poetry to the Lit, which was always joyfully received; while Old George Murray was running Doc Merz—he of undying fame—a close race for the largest amount of stuff in the Record. York had already made the Record Board, but his Harrison Fisher girls and Arrow Collar men continued to lighten up the pages of our comic paper. Occasionally, too, Charlie Stewart would feel a spasm of poetry coming on, and would rush it over to the sanctum of the Lit.

Too High Brow to Catalogue

Don't ever think that we weren't versatile. We shone at everything. The human ducks in our midst were Schlaet and Jim Gould, who could tear up and down Carnegie Pool so fast that the water would grow warm—but that was only once a week, and say, Alex, you ought to feel it on the other six days. These two were the most consistent winners on the team, and, by the way, the team was so good that the New Haven newspapers felt that some new and extraordinary phrase ought to be invented with which to designate our U-men. I think the sporting editor was too busy to invent it himself, so he turned it over to the printer's devil. Anyway this is what was evolved: Mermen.

A Sun Bath

By the way, I forgot way back there to say that in the fall Eddie Crossman and O. B. Cunningham made the News Board. O. B. wanted to be sure and make it, so he made the highest score in our class. But, Alex, it doesn't make any difference about my forgetting it at first, just so I get it in, because Old George has to print it anyway, for he can't get anyone else to write it. See?

Then there was hockey for all those who like to sit and freeze for an hour or two. In order to see that 1917 was properly represented, Moon Murray, York, and Bierwirth chased the puck with agility and honor, and helped the team all through the season.

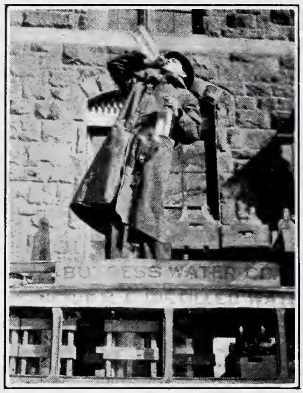

Along in February sometime the faculty played their annual joke on us in the form of the midyear exams. To some, these were more or less of a holiday; to others, a fierce time of trials and tribulations; while a small number, to plagiarize Cæsar a little, could say with perfect truth, "Venimus, vidimus, victi sumus." But as every cloud has its silver lining, the Prom rushed on in time to divert our thoughts from our academic pursuits, and for four days we reveled in our début. There were girls, germans, girls, dinners, girls, concerts, girls, chaperons, girls, the Prom, girls, bills, girls, good-byes,—and then everyone sank into a peaceful coma. But everyone was loud in his praises of the excellent work of our German Committee—and these men achieved the very pinnacle of fame when they announced that there would be a refund.

One night late in February came the great snowball battle. The George Washington's Birthday Rush having died a natural death, the Freshmen and Sophomores proceeded to demonstrate that human nature must be reckoned with when there is a heavy fall of snowball snow. A band of desperadoes sneaked upon Wright Hall, and drove in a dozen or more windows with a dull and sickening thud. Immediately, 1918 sallied forth to retaliate, but our artillery was not to be denied, and we drove them indoors time and time again. Just when victory seemed sure, and when we were preparing for the charge that would rout them, their comrades from York Street executed a flank attack that paralyzed us. Then our windows got what was coming to them, and there was many a curse the next morning over dressing in the open.

On the Water Wagon

With innocent and boyish sports like these we managed to while away the delightful balmy days of winter, and almost before we knew it Easter was at hand. Report has it that all had a pleasant time during this extensive vacation, and we came back for the last lap.

Midnight Oil Stuff

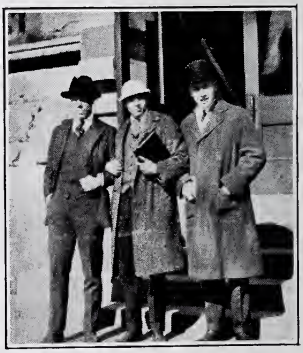

All in Order for the Family

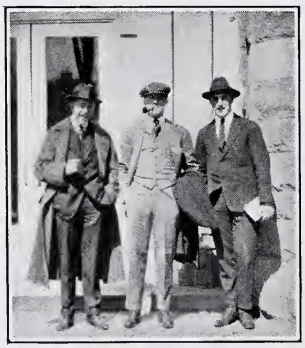

Outdoor-Indoor Baseball

The spring term is the one glad joyous time of the year here, Alex. The fence talkers began to get in their deadly work, and bands of nocturnal prowlers made the night hideous with song. Crew, track, and baseball had their innings, and as usual 1917 was in the front rank. Johnny Overton made all the middle and long distance runners look sick, and was the most consistent point winner on the track team. He had already won his "Y" in the fall at cross country, but in the spring track meets he fairly outdid himself. Treadway in the sprints showed brilliantly in the meets, and these two helped us to beat Harvard and Princeton in the dual meets. However, an unlucky disqualification postponed our winning of the Yale-Harvard trophy for another year.

Messrs. Stewart, Overton, and Violett

Meanwhile, in baseball we had also been doing more than our share. Harry LeGore stopped about everything that came towards shortstop, and then winged them over to first so hard that no one in the world but Pres Bush could have held them. They had been reading up on baseball in Mr. Spalding's well-known guide, and one day they happened to see Willie Keeler's famous advice to batters, "Hit 'em where they ain't." This struck them as such a novel and striking bit of strategy that they decided to put it into practice, with the result that we won the Princeton series, and were barely nosed out by Harvard in the final game. Goody Rhett played in most of the championship games, so we contributed three letter men to the baseball team.

Religion

None of our men was quite able to row on the crew that year, but we swept the river, anyway, so what's the difference?

This was about all that happened in the spring. Savin Rock, Lighthouse Point, and Momauguin came in for their usual share of patronage. Then we crashed through the final exams, and the stuff was off for the year. It only remained for Old Frank Blossom to win the Intercollegiate Golf Championship, and the greatest Sophomore class that ever had been at Yale had passed from the Campus to the shelter of the Junior Oval. I forgot to say anything about the great green cup party at Mory's, where the college record was smashed along with several articles of furniture and a few reputations, but I guess you can imagine what it was like.

JUNIOR YEAR

The bunting season at Savin Rock and the appearance of the June Lit brought our noble Class back to Nuevo Puerto after the usual and unusual conquests of the summer. Our predecessors had left us the Oval, sun dial, Tute Farr, and Ocumpaugh, Mudge, Neave, and Kimberly. With malice aforethought, after complete bewilderment in the kindly (?) furnished instructions from behind Nathan Hale's tomb, we assumed with zeal and fidelity what some called our duties, on September 30. Only a few faces were missing and few forbore changes until the incumbent additions with which we are cursed in Senior year. Some recognized their classmates after the three months' interval and those that didn't pretended they did, so we were off with a bang.

Football, and those pleasant little greetings from the Dean's headquarters, which start, "You are notified that—," had brought some of our corral back early and they had already assumed the ennui characteristic of Yale's elder brothers. Blossom had capped off a successful summer season after downing Tom Collins and others in the Intercollegiate Golf Tournament.

A great change, however, was soon to come over the moral, or perhaps immoral, aspect of our class. Locomotive friction Ingersolls, hoarse throats, sonorous sleepers, and flying hymn books forced a schism in our Sunday devotional exercises. We accordingly resolved into the ten o'clock alarmists and the eleven o'clock deacons. A census later showed a 380 to 24 advantage in favor of the alarmists.

The Irish Kings
(Including the Crown Prince)

This was not the only bomb thrown in our camp, for we were awakened one morning to find Pumpelly, Rhett, and Harry LeGore proclaimed the great ineligibles for playing ball on summer afternoons and receiving purple parasols and other impractical remunerations for their terpsichorean agility in the evenings. Relief was found and restitution made when they were subsequently restored to athletic grace in the year following. All who were acquainted with the facts perceived that it was an absolutely unintentional violation of a rule which had long lain dormant.

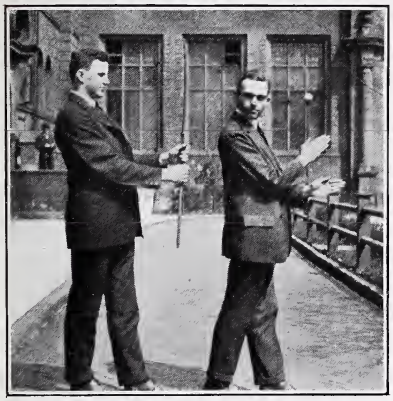

Over hill and dale, Johnny Overton, the King of Harriers, outsped the Cross Country teams of Harvard and Princeton, while our Football Team was busy in its preliminary season. The latter's victory over Princeton by the score of 13 to 7 was not forgotten even after the crushing defeat by a perfect Crimson team to the tune of 41 to 0. Church was our only representative in the Princeton game but he held down a wing in admirable style. In the Harvard game was Church again and F. E. Waite. The election of Olsen to manager of next year's team gave a foreboding of a most successful season.

Along with the athlete went the Mexican athlete during the tribulation of the fall campaign season. Undescribable groups of Juniors attacked the poor defenseless Sophomores even in their own rooms, while gum-shoe men sat on the fence in the true Yale style and poured forth to itching ears the ros(e)y and sub-"ros(e)y" prospects of the legitimates and illegitimates. B. T. P., magnanimously forming a campaign system all its own, broke the bonds of tradition and ground for an open-air aërodrome. As to who deceived the best twenty, we would reply in true Teeandbee style "de gustibus non est disputandum."

Intellect

Notwithstanding protests from F. S. J., a respite of two weeks was declared for the Yuletide season and many of our class were found "doing their bit" in more than one extra-curriculum way. "An Ideal Husband" was shown to advantage in the East and Middle West, largely through the efforts of Burke, Tweddell, Jennings, Healy, Cunningham, and Murray; the latter two lifted scenes and supplied the "yellows" with scandal. A further assault on the West and a sudden sally on the South was made by the musical clubs and the 1917 stiff front was presented by Bush, Clement, Walker, Finley, and Manager James as the preëminent. Upon their return, "Pres," when interviewed, said, "Life is but one song." While these chastened Orpheus or Orpheus chased them, Bierwirth, Moon Murray, and Hoke York pursued the elusive puck, while Princeton won two out of three games from us. Mallon, Conway, and Olsen succeeded, however, in bringing back four victories out of seven starts for our Basketball Team. This was Christmas from the point of view of the Historian, who has attempted to separate fact from fiction. Reports came in from New York to San Francisco, from Alaska to the Gulf, but the hand of the censor has been raised, as has the cost of white paper and the voice of our Class Secretary, crying, "On with the history."

The Old Front Porch

Waiting for 7 p.m.

After the milk train had spilled its annual January load we were not to sink into innocuous desuetude (Liz. Club advt.) nor any long winter's nap. Every year at this time, just to relieve the monotony of any seven ordinary week days, the faculty (no capital), as faculties always do with the utmost complacency, insolence, and ceteris paribus impunity, proved sans doute the remarkable ability of the undergraduate mind to resist the entrance of knowledge. Invention, progress, the new and unknown, are what the world clamors for to-day, and yet with deafened ears and blinded eyes our revered authorities cling to the Methuselean tradition. But time, like murder, will out.

February and March ushered in the two big Promenades of the year—Junior and Hibernian. Both were held in the Armory, and both were declared to be tremendous successes. It is rather difficult to say exactly in which way a promenade is a success—it must be judged from different angles and corners. Who danced the greatest distance, was cut in on the most, slept least, looked best, wore least, are still subjects to be debated. The Junior festivities were planned and executed by Bush, Pumpelly, LeGore, Shepard, Walker, Woolley, O'Brien and Spencer in a manner which must have caused even the gallant Sir Walter Raleigh to regret that he had not lived to spread his House-of-Kuppenheimer for the Elizabeths, Marys, and numerous Janes that graced this memorable occasion. To epitomize in Prom vernacular, the girls were extravagant, the music crashing, the floor slick, the weather terrible, the chaperons helpless, the Taft priceless, Longleys' divine, and sleep impossible. A better time was never enjoyed, however, and we all look back on it with a justifiable pride. Just a word about the aftermath or Irish Informal: Sergeant O'Brien and Obie Cunningham outshamrocked us all and were awarded the wooden shillelahs and green waistcoats.

Soon we began to hear of the success of our members in other lines. Whitey Schlaet was busy captaining a victorious Swimming Team, and Galt was holding down a position on the Water Polo Team; Pflieger was tweaking the boys in fencing and Estill, Potter, Smith, Wallace, and Bennett were winning honors in wrestling. Bellinger, Bridgman, and Pinney carried away laurels in debating and oratory. We slowly emerged into the informal banqueting season and various elections to various offices. The thespian Burke was elevated to the presidency of the Dramat, with Cunningham, Tweddell, Jennings, and Murray as assistants. The musical clubs sang forth Bush as their President and James as their Manager. Clement was elected Leader of the Banjo-Mandolin department and Finley and Walker Recorders. Richards, who in three years had amassed no less than seventy-five hours' credit and saved as many cuts, agreed to accept the presidency of B. P. K.—which, when translated, means we have met the faculty and they are ours. Simpson was destined to guide the editorial policy of the pristine Daily News and filled its column in his naïve way with sesquipedalia verba, while Isham was appointed banker of said sheet. The naval policy of the University Club was entrusted to Commodore Hen Taylor and its rival, Dwight Hall, to Deacons Gould, Mallon, and Clement. The Owl hooted forth the election of York, Murray, Ely, Lawrence, and Gifford as officers, while the Lit (short for literary) modestly proclaimed Bellinger litterateur maximus. Not to be outdone, the Courant, featured by Frank Couch's Brownie, bequeathed its liabilities to Weyerhaeuser. Although Spencer would not recognize Violett's F. A. C. five nor Lucey's Rangers, he was elected Manager of the University Basketball Team. With Murray chosen as

Captain and Landon as Manager of Hockey for 1917, we foresaw a more successful season ahead, after having been vanquished in this year's championship match.

The Oval now began to thaw out and boasted of more shadows than the sun dial and hedgehog. With the approach of spring, the little birds and transparent buttresses began to flit above our heads; and Juniors acted as Juniors always act with the advent of this most invigorating and rejuvenating season. Track, baseball, and crew called forth their material, as did golf, tennis, and lacrosse. Then Easter was upon us. It is a vacation always welcomed with gusto after the winter stretch and serves as an excellent forestaller of that inimicable otium cum dignitate which undergraduates term spring fever. Our track candidates remained behind us to round in form and wear the paths down.

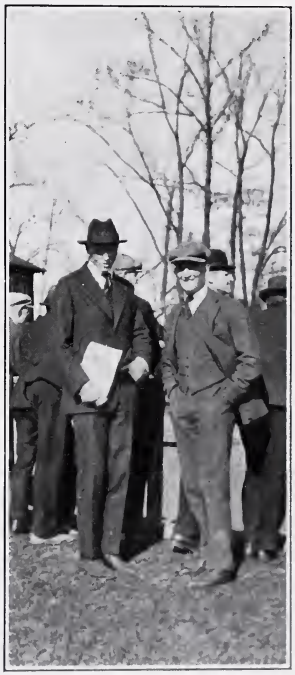

The Art of Make-up

Leo Morris was standing in his office to greet us on our return and looked well in Oliver's winter suit. The Baseball Team, which had been on a pleasure trip through the South, won two of its five games as an incidental concern. Armstrong, Mudge, Bush, and Underwood were our representatives on the trip, and Harry LeGore, who had not as yet been restored to his status ante bellum, was official scorer among other things. Captain Schlaet conducted the Swimming Team on a two-thousand-mile trip through the West, and swam on the Relay Team which established a new world's record. The first crew lost to Pennsylvania on the Schuylkill, while the second crew won at the same place. Harriman was in the first boat, and Adams and Whittlesey in the second.

To those who did not have the good fortune to rehearse with either the "Treasure Chest" or the Pageant, it would be too difficult to portray the delicate parts taken by our Class—especially behind the scenes. But allow me to pass to and by the Sword and Gun-Mohican dance, Wallace's collection of silver at the Kahn's ball, and other such occasions of this spring too numerous to be mentioned. Who does not remember how the Oval reverberated time and again with the exuberant joy of one, yea, even crowds, who celebrated the finding of a peanut with that Bacchic ode which begins "I found a peanut" and ends in that sublime epigram "It tasted like a banana"? This is just one of the many songs peculiar to Mr. Berkeley's Oval and to the hours between one and four in the morning, when everyone is sure to be awake. Just here should be mentioned our class party at the Taft with Tweddell's personal impersonations and Chilton's black-faced minstrels. The Class was all together and rivaled "Bundle Day" and Omega Lambda Chi, when joy was unconfined. The usual Tap Day ceremonies were conducted on the Campus and left us bareheaded and with no other change except a weekly stiff collar here and there, but not always the same collar.

Judges at the Finish

The honors in tennis had been upheld by Hopkins, Weber, Captain Kelly, Ball, and Stoddard, while Church, Volk, Spencer, Bennet, and Lambert had flitted hither and thither with their lacrosse sticks. Blossom, Armstrong, and Gaines upheld our honor on the golf links. In track, Overton made our reputation renowned. With Cooper, he ran on the two-mile Relay Team at Pennsylvania, which made a world's record, and, being a double winner of the mile and two-mile events in the dual meets, helped the Track Team to defeat both Harvard and Princeton. In addition Yale won second place in the Intercollegiates, in which both Overton and Treadway scored. "Y's" were awarded to Overton, Treadway, E. Davis, L. Davis, Nichols, Offutt, and Heyl during the season, at the close of which Overton was elected Captain and Bentley Manager.

The Crew had gone to New London with Coe as a coach and Estill as Manager of the Freshmen. Harriman and Whittlesey were in the first boat, which lost to Harvard, and Gamble in the second. The Baseball Team, after a successful preliminary season, defeated Princeton but lost to Harvard. Mudge did not play after the first Princeton game owing to an accident. He, as catcher, and Bush, as first baseman, were our two regular representatives on the team and won their "Y's," as did Conway, Thomas, and Armstrong. In mentioning athletic events, we cannot pass over the production of The Walkers (Die Walküre in German) in the Bowl. Gadski stood on the ten-yard line and with Whitehill, Kurt, Braun, Sembrich, and Schumann-Heink on her side put over a perfect score in spite of the strong opposition of Dutch Carter and other rabids. Wallace and Walker left immediately afterwards to drive ambulances in France.

Our Own Announcer

All through the year there had been growing in our Class a certain spirit best typified in our college motto, "For Country and for Yale," which, in June, was destined to manifest itself in a practical way and amply prove the justification of its existence. It was the spirit of militarism, preparedness, and service. The first seeds were planted at the opening of college. The European War, the threatened crisis in Mexico, and Plattsburg preparedness camps had opened our eyes. The more thoughtful determined that in case of trouble Yale should be ready to do her bit. Shepley, Cowles, Bachman, Farnam, and others were the organizing factors in our Class. Through the aid of the government, faculty, and Yale Daily News, a voluntary training in artillery was begun. The seeds had sprouted and through the winter were fostered and nourished until the Yale Batteries evolved. On the verge of leaving for our respective destinations in June, the situation in Mexico became more grave and the President found the Yale Batteries ready to answer his call—ready in the time of need. They were sworn into the federal service and subsequently ordered to Tobyhanna, Pennsylvania, to await developments.

The First Class Boy

Thus ended our Junior year—gone but not forgotten. The khaki uniforms were picturesque on the Campus and impressive. It made us realize more clearly what Yale stood for. The year had been intermingled with pleasure and work, duty and play. All the events cannot be recorded and memory must supply those omitted. It was the first year we were really together as a unit—only a few being relegated to rooms other than on the Oval. Friendships were developed to a fuller extent; a broader outlook on life was the inevitable result. Tot homines, quot sententiæ. We pass on into Senior year and fuller developments, but with memories and friendships which will last while there is life.

To the outsider, Senior year would seem a time for sedate, dignified diversions, for studious consecration to the pursuit of learning, and for serious preparation for the responsibilities and the stern realities of life after graduation. But, fortunately or unfortunately, this was not the point of view of the average member of the Class of 1917. While to some, more fortunate than the rest perhaps, the Star of Knowledge still led on, for many of us it had sunk below the horizon somewhat earlier in the course, and its place had been usurped by other constellations, which at the time seemed of greater magnitude. So perhaps it were best to acknowledge at the outset that the spirit of Senior year was, "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow—"

The beginning of the year was propitious. To those who had spent the summer at a certain watering-place in the Pennsylvania hills, getting up at seven o'clock, or seven-thirty, was heavenly. Even the Dogs of War of last spring, Ed Crossman and Tom Cowles, had ceased to relish the smell of powder. To those who had spent the summer as civilians, the swearing vocabulary possessed by their military classmates was a constant source of pleasure. Whereas last year one word had done yeoman service in several different connections, fifty now stood willing to express the finer shades of meaning. Beauty Bill Kent's conversation, while picturesque, and interesting, was no longer considered remarkable. Crowds of admiring undergraduates hung on the slightest phrase of Hank Scudder's, and Harry Donahoe brought tears to the eyes of his hearers by invoking the female of the canine family.

It was pleasant to stand around the edges of the crowd at the Freshman wrestling matches, feeling supreme Olympian detachment from the activities of the budding Freshman class, and suggesting impossible candidates for the first collegiate honor. Certainly the Class of 1917 seemed a splendid collection of Wags, Jackals, and Asas. Mory's took to serving a Senior Luncheon every day. "At the Tables" the Whiffenpoofs assembled every Monday night according to tradition, and after several weeks the delighted hearers agreed that as a singing crowd this year's "Whiffs" were a wonderful drinking club. Stew Clement, Woodie Ward, and Hen Landon strove valiantly with the "Talcum Tenor" part, while Sergeants A. C. Bush and O. D. O'Brien taught the boys the songs immortalized by the Baltimore quartet.

It was here sometime early in the fall that Ned Chilton produced his greatest success, "Crossing the Bar" (with imprecations), to the tune of "I've Got a Sweet Tooth a Botherin' Me." This same old Temple Bar saw the foundation of a new stealthy society known as The Domino, whose purpose was to meet and immerse its members in good spirits. Mosh Murray, Henry Donahoe, Shorty O'Brien, Rut Shepley, Stan Burke, Charley Stewart, Gus Healy, Austie Dunham, Bill Kent, and Melzar Whittlesey, were wont to assemble in their shirt sleeves once a week and "bicker." Their first meeting broke up disastrously when Bill Krueger served them a special Cup, made from Scotch Whisky, Turpentine, and Omega Oil.

But if the Class of 1917 rests its claim to fame upon one ground more than another, it is on the Football season. The fall term was only a few days old when all began to realize that Yale had a real football team at last. That Rara Avis in Terra, Yale Spirit, came slowly but surely back into evidence, and November twenty-fifth and the Harvard game began to be viewed with anticipation and even pleasure. Yale's much-vaunted "threat," Harry LeGore, was back in the game. Effie Waite figured as one of Yale's "pony backs," and Sam Duryee, Bill Kent, Tom Charlton, Hank Conway, Con Leisenring, Stan Metcalf, Red Nichols, and Morris Smith gave 1917 a comfortable majority on the squad. Under the management of Bert Olsen, thousands of people flocked to see the early season games.

Senior Prom Committee

Class Day Committee

Suddenly it was forced upon our attention that Yale was giving America a big party on October twenty-first, known as the Pageant. Bob Pflieger, Lit Gould, and Ellery James served in an official capacity, and handed out costumes (for which each aspiring actor paid). They had some difficulty in getting the Class and Mr. Markoe out for a rehearsal at the same time. However, when the sun shone fair on October twenty-first, all joined unreservedly in the attempt to make the Pageant a great success. While it was voted an inspiring spectacle by all present, even Alfred Bellinger could not rave over such a poetical masterpiece as:

"War!
The chaos of will
The fruit of desire—
Vomits its destruction.
War!
From whose horrible maw of hideous pain
Are spewed forth
In the cud of despair
The regurgitate waste
Of our hopes, dreams, and need."

Stan Burke was at a loss to understand such stage directions as: "First there shall be silence and then a low, long, wailing cry as if the hearts of all the world were breaking . . . then a thin, white sound, glad as the dancing of sunlight on rippling waters. . . . First advancing come the young men who have found their manhood. Then come Life's wastrels . . . drifting hither and thither like efts in an uncomprehended stream . . . malicious ganglia of mischief." It seems that sufficient honor would have been attached to the name of Yale in this of all years, if less time and money had been lavished on perfecting so gigantic a display advertisement.

An event which caused some slight local interest about this time was the presidential election. The Republican Club of Yale University was an outgrowth of the excitement, quickly followed by the formation of a Democratic Club. Ken Simpson, Jerry Evarts, Jerry Bachman, Gus Healy, Pres Bush, and a host of others collected one dollar from each loyal Republican, and enjoyed a very good banquet at the Taft on the campaign fund. The Democrats were few in number—always a characteristic of those who can "pick the winner." Ken O'Brien, Ned Chilton, and George Murray were the party-leaders and had frequent conferences with flashy-looking individuals, "straight from headquarters at The Biltmore." The News waged a long fight to win for such members of the University as were "free, white, and twenty-one," and had served in the Tenth F. A. N. G. C., the right to vote. After superhuman efforts, perjury, and a number of bad cigars, some few chosen individuals safely reached the polls, and retired behind the green draperies to wrestle with the intricacies of the voting machine. By virtue of a special wire to Republican headquarters, Fifth Avenue, the News was enabled to get all the "inside dope," and learned early on election night that Hughes had been elected by a comfortable majority. This fact was announced to the college world by headlines in twelve-point type next morning, and caused much rejoicing.

Dick Bentley arranged the Intercollegiate Cross Country Meet a little later, which was won by Johnny Overton, who was followed after a time by Ed Knox and Fenny Cooper. John pressed the large silver soup tureen, which was the first prize, into the hands of the young lady who ruled his fancy at the moment, and registered a complaint with the management that a diamond medal had not been given, instead of such a bulky trophy.

Moon

Soon the ticket department was called upon to meet the multifarious requirements for tickets to the Harvard game, ranging from the man who "wants his seats on the aisle as his wife is rather large," to the one who has a cold and refuses to sit in any location where there is a draft. Playing through one of the hardest schedules any Yale team has faced, the Varsity came up against defeat only once—at the hands of Brown. Between the halves came the Whiffenpoof celebration, resurrected at the Dean's behest. Clad in various gorgeous uniforms, the "Whiffs" staggered into the Bowl hauling a villainous-looking wooden cannon and an apparently inoffensive mouse-colored burro. After a brief and unmilitary drill, the piece was fired, and the burro came to life by kicking Gus Healy in the stomach, to his evident surprise. Efforts to remove the recalcitrant animal proving futile, Ken O'Brien announced to the assembled thousands, that a gentleman's shaving set would be given to anyone who could pluck "Pansy" from the field. Then Frank Brophy came leaping from ramp to ramp, and, after carefully wrapping a bottle of cough medicine in an American flag, vaulted on and off "Pansy's" back eleven times in three minutes. Whether it was the effect of this celebration, or of injuries and fatigue, the football team met defeat in the last half, and for a time hopes were dashed—low.

But after the Princeton game had demonstrated what stuff that team was made of, Yale stock began to be quoted in Wall Street. Every one of the 80,000 spectators who saw the Harvard game (except those who wore red neckties, of course) declared it to be the greatest athletic event in history. Nineteen Seventeen was there to a man; some were with families and "smelts," politely explaining the game, others in the Cursing Section, cursing. "Six to three"—you can't laugh that off, and with that alone the year would have been a success.

The University Calendar announced Thanksgiving Recess a few days later, which certainly resembled the recess between two exams in one afternoon. Early in December, two distinguished-looking foreigners arrived on the Campus preceded by "boys" carrying their luggage and steamer rugs. When these turned out to be no others than Sam Walker and Tee Wallace, speaking in broken English of the blessés and the front line trenches in France, one or two jubilation parties and wakes were solemnized. Maternally speaking, the Class breathed a sigh of relief to have her two wayward sons return to her arms, and settled down for a little work before the Christmas holidays. Basketball and hockey posters began to appear on the sodden Campus and lots of minor sports were in evidence. Deevie Garstin made a sensation with pink placards advertising the boys in the tank, while Henry Landon began to freeze the ice at the Arena for the early season games. Hole York soon showed that his eye was as good if not better than ever, and proved rough on pucks when they came his way. With York and Jack Bierwirth, Moon Murray had pretty good "home talent" around which to build a winning team.

At the beginning of the vacation, the Basketball Team, and the Musical and Dramatic Clubs set forth in quest of fame and the unwary dollar. Stuff Spencer persuaded Harry LeGore to give up the invitations of three or four lovesick maidens to join the basketball team in the wilds of Pennsylvania.

Our Captains

Before the game with Loyola Academy a sandwich man scoured the city with a sign bearing the startling announcement, "Loyola Academy vs LeGore & yale." Neil Mallon, and Bert Olsen were reported as doing some pretty bits of goal-shooting on several occasions.

The musical clubs and the Dramat finally pulled out, after the railroad companies had played the usual game of "hide and seek" with the coveted baggage and private cars. The Glee and Banjo boys went out into the money belt, while the tragedians scoured the great Near East. Ellery James had the same fatal effect on railway officials that Pres Bush had on timber wolves and was furnished two special trains. In one case, according to the testimony of John Koehne, Bill

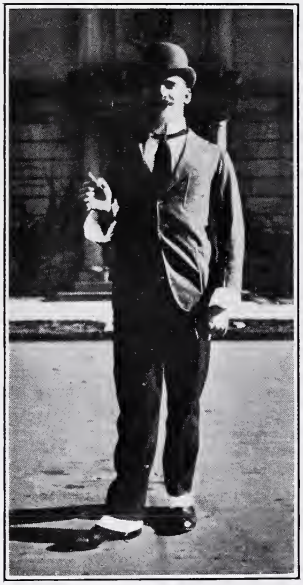

Kelly, Jarv Offutt, Ike Fearn, and Mike Noyes, and other unprejudiced witnesses, the train averaged (approximately) one hundred and seventy-two miles an hour for four hours. "Mr. Clemens," the handsome leader of the Mandolin Club, was a prominent figure at all the hops and socials, while Johnny Overton traveled spasmodically with the clubs, getting stuck in a snowdrift near Le Roy, N. Y., for several days. John made all the official announcements until he left the safe ground of explaining printer's errors on the program, and addressed a crowd of haughty dowagers and "debs" as follows: "If you all will just get a wriggle on, Frank Shepard will show some of you Buffalo beauties how to dance."

"Ours" was the name of this year's Dramat vehicle. To continue the figure, its axles had become rusty, and its body somewhat antiquated since its vogue in 1866. In those days it was considered a comedy, but times have evidently changed, as the undersigned will testify that whenever any unseemly laughter was heard from the audience, Monty Woolley would frantically dash into the wings to see which character had knocked over the lamp or lost his moustache, or his hoopskirt. The troupe was graced by the presence of Dink Donahoe, Hotty Cooper, and Ken O'Brien, and generaled by Stan Burke. Fenny achieved an unusual record by persuading a gushing young lady from Philadelphia to go to Africa as a missionary, thus showing how one may make the best of being "stuck." Coincident with the conversion of "Sister Eva" came the announcement of Stan Burke's engagement, which occasioned much elation on the Jersey Flats. Harry Donahoe proved that dancing lessons pay, and was pronounced by all the ladies, "light as a feather."

But all too soon we were attending "college exercises" again, with midyears only two weeks off. When it became evident that Yale had been misrepresented as regards compulsory military service, "Ward Boss," K. F. Simpson, hurriedly gathered together a gang composed of Jerry Bachman, Dick Richards, Jerry Evarts, and Sam Duryee, and other dyed-in-the-wool Republicans. A straw vote of the University was held, and the results rushed to Washington by the G. O. P.

backers, which told the Senate Committee one or two things about the defects of the militia system and sentiment at Yale.

Examinations may be passed over with the comment that, though the idea of taking them may seem funny now, it didn't occasion much humor at the time. When the last Saturday came and each Senior was about to breathe a sigh of relief and start looking over the state of his "facings," and dress shirts for the Prom, diplomatic relations were suddenly broken off with Germany, giving force to the old Scandinavian adage, "This life is just one damn thing after another."

Asa

At this point, Captain Johnny Overton took his relay team to the B. A. A. games and with the help of Fenny Cooper succeeded in showing Harvard a clean pair of heels. Jonathan Stone Raymond, B.A. (our first to graduate), departed for Boston to superintend the final arrangements for his approaching felicity, and Bunny Harriman and Ellery James set off for that mysterious region known as "The Country," with the same end in view.

Even the imminence of war could not put the lid on the Germans and the other parties before the Prom, which seemed even gayer than usual. On Tuesday afternoon, Higgie Isham caused a tremendous sensation by spreading the report that he had "unofficial but authentic information" that Germany was about to declare war on us. The Dining Hall, so long despised and contemptuously dubbed a "bowling alley," demonstrated to the satisfaction of all present that it is an ideal place for the Promenade. Perhaps the prominent Yale men of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries who looked down from the walls were amazed and even shocked, but they fitted into a scheme of decoration which in its simplicity was far superior to the cheesecloth finery and barbaric display which have been necessary in the Armory. The Class was very well represented at the Prom, although Leon Dunne was at Palm Beach of course—hunting "mice." At the last minute, Gus Healy decided to stag it, while "Old 61" Meek was present, but not dancing—much. Seth Morrison won the Cross Country Dancing Contest, but was only a few bars ahead of Jack Toole. Paul Leary was seen dancing fancy steps from time to time. While it would be possible to linger over the pleasures of the great Junior Ball longer, it is necessary to press on and simply remark that before it seemed possible, it was over, and for a time the bottom dropped out of everything.

Early Spring, 1917

The Yale News of February 8th appeared with the headlines in twenty-one-point type. In the place of the leading editorial was a cut of the proverbial Bull and the legend, "Thrown for the last time." Responsibility for the issue seems to lie with Rabindranath Tagore. Soon many members of the class were busy with Winter Track, and a little later with Baseball in the Cage, and Crew Work on the Machines. A large number favored Squash, which became exceedingly popular at the new courts in the Gym Annex. Among those who were universally acknowledged as pretty clever with a racquet were Louie Harden, Walter Paepcke, Ken O'Brien, and Sam Walker.

With the traditional Ship of State drifting slowly but surely into war, the college went more or less serenely on its way until the actual declaration came. The Hockey Team lost twice to Princeton, and won as many times from Harvard. The Basketball Team weathered a long, hard season, and came through with the championship and boys'-size "Y's." Johnny Overton set a record of 4:16 for the mile indoors. The Baseball Team got away to a splendid start, but was forced to disband to clear the track for active war preparations. Two of our crews crossed the finish ahead of two Pennsylvania boats at Philadelphia, and athletics, for us, were over. The memorable sixth of April brought us face to face with war with Germany to make the world safe for democracy, and in this struggle the call of the nation will not be unanswered by the Class of 1917.

Although it has always been customary for the Historian of Senior Year to complete his masterpiece early in April and allow the martyred Class Secretary to get the Class Book on the press at that time, it would be neither discreet nor desirable to attempt to record the events of May or June just now. For although one might write of the warm days on the beach at Momauguin, and the taste of the clay pipes on Class Day, he would probably be trying his hand at a kind of writing of which Baron Münchausen has given us a perfect example.

But as we near the final parting, and the world beyond looms big before us, the petty trials and troubles against which

Spring!

We Start Off Another Year

we have rebelled as undergraduates pale into insignificance. We almost begrudge the passage of the last few weeks and hours, at the end of which we must leave this University, where most of us have made our best friends, have received our highest inspirations, and have spent our pleasantest days. The future holds in store for us more uncertainty than for most graduating classes. But in the heart of each is the desire that we may all meet "the menace of the years" resolutely and courageously, and play our parts to the honor of Yale and of the Class, until that far-distant time when we will all be together again—"down on Union Square."

TRACY ACOSTA, "Trace," was born February 3, 1894, in Charleston, S. C., but soon after his birth moved to Jacksonville, Fla., where he has lived ever since.

His father, Tracy Lucien Acosta, was born in Florida, in 1856, and has spent most of his life there, being state agent for Florida of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia. He is an ex-member of the Class of '82 of the University of Georgia. His mother, Cora (Bailey) Acosta, lived in Camden County, Georgia, before her marriage. There are two sons and a daughter living; one son is deceased.

Trace prepared at the Duval High School, Jacksonville, and at Lawrenceville. He received a second colloquy stand Junior year, was a member of the Freshman Football Team, winning his numerals, and is a member of Psi Upsilon. He roomed with Robert S. Stoddart the first three years, at 645 Wright, 178 Lawrance, and 490 Haughton; and with Spencer S. Pumpelly, at 16 Vanderbilt, Senior year.

Acosta expects to enter the law after taking a course in the Harvard Law School. He may be addressed at Box 71, Jacksonville, Fla.

CHARLES JOSEPH ADAMEC was born June 7, 1895, in New York City, where he lived for ten years; since that time East Haven, Conn., has been his home.

His father, Vincent Adamec, was born in Tabor, Bohemia, August 13, 1866, and is a farmer. His mother was Antoinette Skokan of New York City. There are two sons in the family.

Charles J. Adamec

Charles prepared at the New Haven High School, and in Junior year won an oration stand. He lived at home during his entire course.

Adamec expects to become a teacher; his permanent address is Foxon, East Haven, Conn.

NORMAN ILSLEY ADAMS, JR., "Norm," was born September 20, 1895, in Winthrop, Mass., and lived there for ten years. Since then, with the exception of one year spent in Boston, he has lived in Lexington, Mass.

Norman Ilsley Adams, Jr.

His father, Norman Ilsley Adams, was born February 16, 1864, in Hyde Park, Mass., and was graduated from Yale College in 1886. He is a banker, being a vice-president of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston. His mother, Mabel Estelle (George) Adams, resided in Boston prior to her marriage. There are two sons in the family.

Norman prepared at the Lexington High School; he won philosophical oration rank in Junior year, preliminary honors in physics, took both the Donald Annis and the Dettra prizes in Sophomore year, and a Stanley prize in Junior year. He is secretary of Phi Beta Kappa. He roomed with Woodruff Johnson all four years; Freshman year, at 602 Wright; Sophomore year, at 205 Farnam; Junior year, at 349 White; and Senior year, at 391 Berkeley.

Adams intends to enter the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in further preparation for his chosen occupation of electrical engineer. His permanent address is 22 Eliot Road, Lexington, Mass.

WILLIAM ADAMS, JR., "Bill," was born September 25, 1894, in Tuxedo, N. Y., but has lived nearly all his life in Lawrence, Long Island.

His father, William Adams, was born in Scarsdale, N. Y., on March 26, 1870. He was graduated from Sheff in 1891 and is an architect in New York. His mother, Alice Cameron (Greenleaf) Adams, was a resident of Lenox, Mass., before her marriage. Besides his father, Bill has several Yale relatives: a great-uncle, Thatcher M. Adams, '58; uncles, Thatcher M. Adams, Jr., '95 S.; Thomas S. Adams, '01 S., and John C. Greenleaf, '99 S.; and a brother, Lewis G. Adams, '20.

Wm. Adams Jr.

Bill prepared at Groton School, and won first colloquy rank in Junior year. He was a member of the Freshman Four-Oar and Second Varsity crews and the University Squash Team for three years, winning his numerals. He heeled the Courant Freshman year and is a member of Psi Upsilon and Wolf's Head. He roomed with Samuel Sloan Duryee during his entire course, at 634 Wright, Freshman year; 114 High Street, Sophomore year; 485 Haughton, Junior year; and 92 Connecticut, Senior year.

Adams expects to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University. His permanent address is Lawrence, Long Island, N. Y.

JAMES RICHARD AHERN, "Jimmie," was born August 7, 1895, in New Haven, Conn.

His father, Edward J. Ahern, was born November 15, 1866, in New York City. He is a retired wholesale liquor merchant. His mother, Margaret (Maroney) Ahern, lived in New Haven before her marriage. There are three children living; two are deceased.

James R. Ahern

Jimmie prepared at the New Haven High School. He went out for the crew, and contributed articles to the Yale Daily News and the Yale Record. He was a member of the Yale Catholic Club. He lived at home for the first three years, and Senior year with James D. Lucey at 79 Connecticut.

Ahern expects to enter the Yale School of Law. His permanent address is 470 Poplar Street, New Haven, Conn.

GEORGE LOCKWOOD AIKEN was born in Tientsin, China, January 10, 1896. He has lived in Tientsin, China; Hartford, Conn.; Paotingfu, China, and Auburndale, Mass.

His father, Rev. Edwin Edgerton Aiken, graduated from Yale College in 1881, and received the degree of B.D. in 1884. He is serving on a committee employed by the American Bible

G. L. Aiken

Society in revising the Chinese translation of the Bible. His mother, Maud (Lockwood) Aiken, died in China in 1899. There are two sons and two daughters living. Besides his father his Yale relatives are Martin Welles, '82; a brother, E. E. Aiken, Jr., '16; and Leonard Beadle, '19.

Aiken prepared at the Newton High School in Massachusetts. He is a member of the University Debating Association, Cosmopolitan Club, Society for Study of Socialism, International Polity Club, and Phi Beta Kappa. He won a philosophical oration stand in Junior year. He roomed at 639 Wright with W. Hanna (first term) and at 641 Wright with E. W. Sutherland (second term) during Freshman year; at 1165 Taylor and 415 Berkeley with Sutherland and H. B. Breeding, Sophomore and Junior years; and at 106 Welch, with Chi-ting Kwei and Shao-chang Lee, Senior year.

Woody prepared at the Vergennes High School and at the Rosenbaum Tutoring School. Freshman year he roomed with H. Staunton Woodman and Atha T. Whitaker, at 399 Berkeley; Sophomore year with Spalding W. Ovitt and Theodore C. Marceau, Jr., at 238 Durfee; and Junior year with Ovitt, at 430 Fayerweather.

Woodman left college at the end of Junior year, and entered the employ of the H. K. McCann Company of New York, where he remained until July, 1916, doing special investigation work for two months. Since then he has been with the American Sugar Refining Company of New York, first in the capacity of salesman, and later as office manager's assistant. His permanent address is Vergennes, Vt.

EX-MEMBERS

FREDERICK GARDINER BART BERGER, '18 S., 5516 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

ROBERT JAMES BROWN, JR., "Bob," was born in Prides Crossing, Mass., August 31, 1893.

His father, Robert James Brown, was born in Scotland, August 12, 1864, but has spent most of his life in Canada and in Massachusetts in the vicinity of Boston. He is a farmer. His mother, Margaret Jane (McAlden) Brown, resided in Boston before her marriage. There were five sons and a daughter; two sons are deceased. Edwin Henry Brown, '19, is a brother.

Bob prepared at the Holliston High School, Holliston, Mass. He went out for football, basketball, crew, wrestling, and won his numerals on the Freshman Track Team. He is a member of Psi Upsilon. He was with our Class during a part of Freshman year and roomed alone, at 582 Pierson. He returned to college with 1918 and roomed with L. H. Bosnian and Russell Slocum, at 311 York Street, first year; with John Schubert and E. H. Brown, at 149 Lawrance, Sophomore year; and with W. G. Hoye and J. S. Bradley, at 488 Haughton, Junior year.

Brown expects to complete his course with the Class of 1918. His address is Holliston, Mass.

FRANK WARREN BUXTON, "Buck," "Bux," was born July 5, 1893, in Malden, Mass.

His father, Frank Elijah Buxton, was born in 1866 in Worcester, Mass. He is treasurer of the North End Savings Bank of Boston. His mother, Stella Henrietta (Johnson) Buxton, lived in Worcester before her marriage. There are two children living; one is deceased.

Buck prepared at the Wellesley High School and at Phillips-Andover. He was a member of the Freshman Glee Club and the Apollo Glee Club. He suped in "Harold." Freshman year he roomed alone, at 574 Pierson, and Sophomore year with Henry Scudder and Richardson Greene, at 186 Fayerweather. Buxton left college at the end of Sophomore year on account of sickness. In 1915 he entered Sheff and will graduate this year, having taken the Select Course.

Buxton expects to go into the advertising business. His permanent address is Wellesley, Mass.

WORRELL CLARKSON, JR., was born September 1, 1894, in Duluth, Minn.

His father, Worrell Clarkson, was born February 12, 1870, in Wilmington, Del. He went out for tennis, and was interested in the Sunday school work of Dwight Place Church. He left Yale in Senior year to join the French Ambulance Service, his plan being to take the Senior course in 1918. He roomed alone, at 116 High Street in Junior year.

His permanent address is in care of Amos P. Wilder, Yale Station, New Haven, Conn.

OBITUARIES

WINTHROP HOTCHKISS ALLEN was born at Andover, Mass., on July 8, 1895, and died at Warren, Ohio, on March 17, 1916.

He was a member of the Class for only a short time, leaving it in the spring of 1914. During his brief connection with us, his generous good nature endeared him to all who knew him, and it was with a feeling of deep and genuine grief that we learned of his sudden death.

The death of RUFUS HODGES CLAPP, on June 27, 1916, came to his classmates as a shock, great and almost unbelievable. Even now, it is with the utmost difficulty that one can associate with Rufe the idea of death. Always cheerful, liked by everyone, he was ever ready to give of the best that he had, both to his classmates and to Yale. He had many loyal friends in whose hearts his memory will live always. Brilliant in intellect and lofty in soul, death cut short for him a career that promised great attempts and great achievements. We who saw the beginning, mourn the goal that was never reached, the life that was unfulfilled.

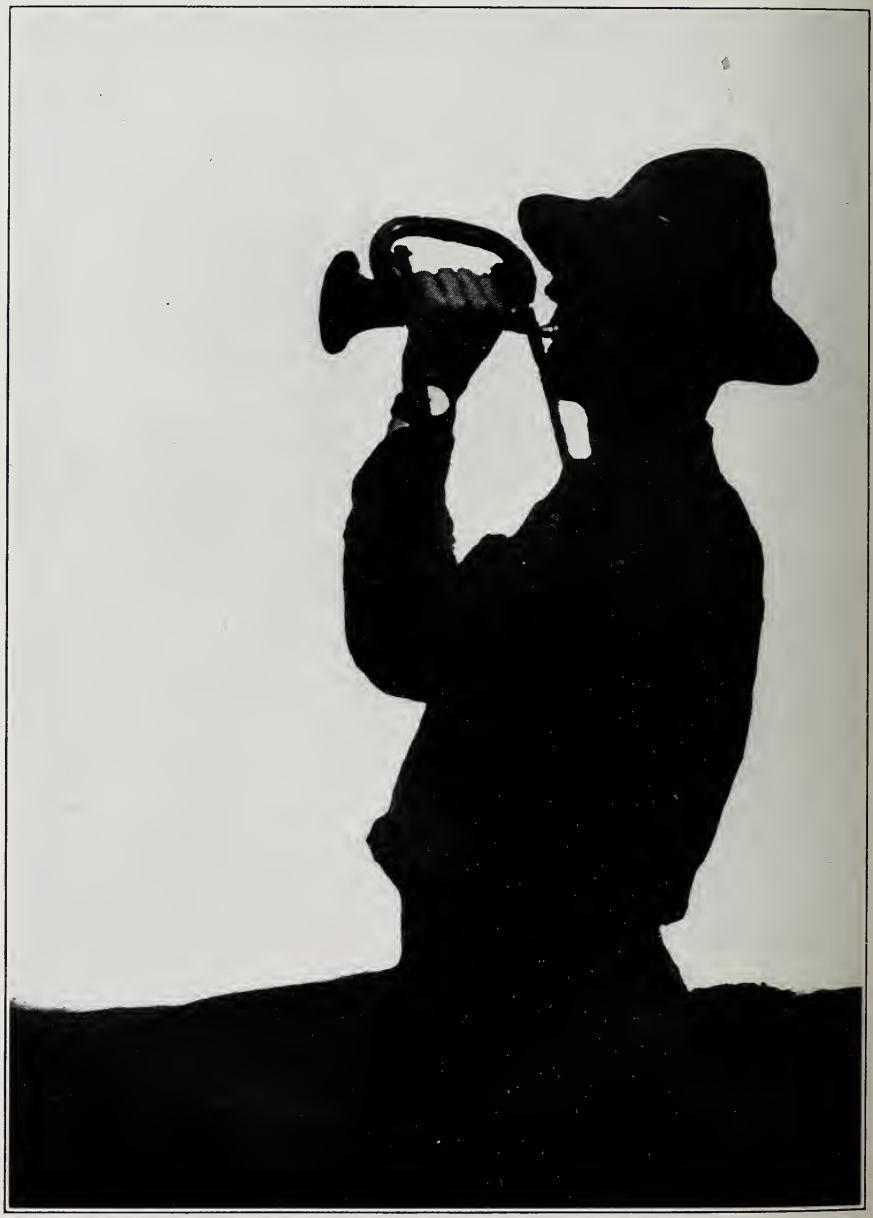

NORMAN PHELPS ROGERS was born July 6, 1896, at Port Dickinson, Broome County, New York, and died at the Yale Infirmary, April 8, 1914.

His optimism and constant good humor characterized his life at Yale. Those who heeled the News with him will always remember the stimulus and inspiration afforded by the cheering example of his smiling disposition.

His death came as a great shock and sorrow to his classmates, with whom he lived only long enough to make us eager to know him better.

1917 AT TOBYHANNA

1917 AT TOBYHANNA

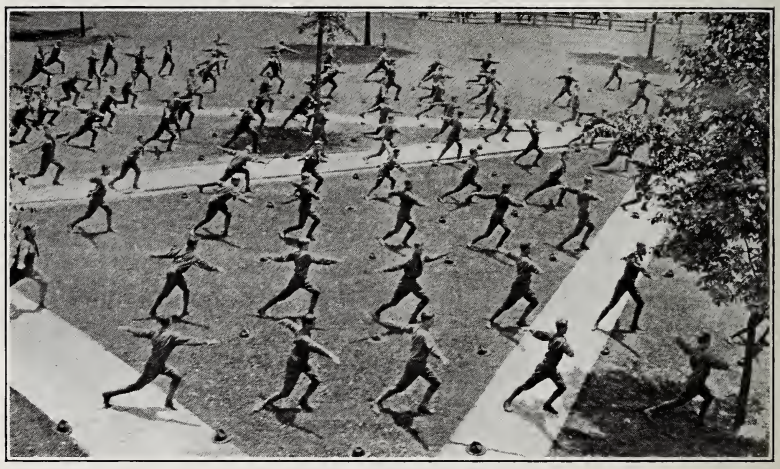

"Turn out the guard, Officer of the Day," called Johnny Overton, who was on Post No. 1 in front of Wright Hall. Then, as the officer returned his salute, he shouted, "To hell with the guard!"

This was typical of our discipline on June 20, 1916, when the National Guard was called out, including the four Yale batteries, which assembled at New Haven under orders to move to the border at once. With Batteries E and F of Branford and Stamford, they formed the Tenth Regiment, but as they were all under strength, and as there were no regimental officers, headquarters and supply companies, doctors, horseshoers, or cooks, it could hardly be called a fighting unit. Members of the battery were well on their several ways home; the material was stored at Smedley's; there were no horses and very little equipment. Only those who had lingered overtime in New Haven reported at the first formation, but a tremor of excitement ran over the ranks, when, at the first formation, the Colonel cautioned every man to have his teeth put in good shape, and we had a hunch it was Mexico.

Delay! Apparently we couldn't leave while below strength. Pres Bush and Bert Olsen hastened to enlist, while even Ken Simpson preferred to be a sergeant-major, rather than a Plattsburg rookie. The Class responded patriotically and finally totaled over 120 men in the regiment. While the harness was being assembled and moved in 500-pound bags, and while every mess-kit was being stamped with the number, battery, date, and price, the Campus witnessed strange sights.

There was the drilling of the awkward squad, punctuated by vociferous arguments between a sergeant, a corporal and seven privates (the privates were always right, but of course they shouldn't have thought at all); the banging of a squad preparing for action; Jerry Bachman's lusty voice commanding B Battery; and the neat rows of dinky dog tents, pitched by detail. But we couldn't do "squads right" for more than five hours a day, and Mamauguin held pleasures for sizzling afternoons. Here John Shepley, specially detailed with Cal Heminway and others, gave swimming instruction to all comers at 3.30 daily, while Savin Rock assumed positively a martial air.

Three weeks after the call, we were ready to move, though none of us knew how to use our greasy automatics, nor had we ever seen a three-inch gun in action. The orders, contradicting the Niantic and Chihuahua rumors, called for entrainment for Tobyhanna, Pa., and we learned something of loading carriages on flat-cars in the heat of the New Haven freight yards. Incidentally, the band enlisted in time to unsteady our marching to the train—this was before Dick Richards had become its preceptor—though its merry-go-round discords were forgotten in the excitement of haversacks and canteens, and the thrill of a big crowd on Chapel Street.

A troop train not being supposed to exceed a speed of twenty-five miles an hour, we spent a bumpy night in dim, smoky coaches, where seats were dismembered and strewn about for beds, while Ken Holmes-Brown, zealous to inspect the guns, overstayed his leave and rode for several hours on a caisson. Dawn brought a splendid view of the Pocono Hills, and, while our serpent-like train was dragging its slow length towards Tobyhanna, we had bacon and hot coffee, served in garbage cans by Hen Landon.

Tobyhanna! A flat, treeless plateau on the top of nothing, characterized by dust and rocks. In fact, Mike Noyes claims that Tobyhanna is solid rock, and he knows, holding the record for burial details. This leads us to remark on horses, which contained, next to the human element, the greatest possibilities of the summer. Major Potter stated that a horse has a temperament, and this was soon proved. Asa Brophy began to enjoy life, and Stan Colt's head bore witness to temperamental hind legs. Larry Rossiter and Em Smith are fitted to demonstrate the safest methods of unloading unbroken, starving artillery steeds at midnight in the rain; Eddie Thurston, assisted by Hank Scudder, can give choice lessons in grooming, while Stuffy Spencer shines in the art of cleaning out the hoofs of the wildest mare. Ed Dixon, too, is qualified to nurse sick horses; and for a good working team on Stable Police, give us Oliver Jennings and Ellery James in "blue denim."

Harry Donahoe held all records for hatching rumors; when not nursing his grievances, he was planning the destination of the regiment. The Danish West Indies would need a garrison of artillery, if bought by the United States; but, when overcoats were issued, Ken Chalmers contradicted this flatly, stating that he had heard from a Branford corporal, who had heard from a headquarters cook, who was told by the captain's orderly, who knew definitely that we were booked for Alaska. The next day, however, O. B. Cunningham, the orderly of the day, brought sure dope that we were to relieve the regulars at Panama. Paul Sessions ran a private rumor-bureau in the Q. M. tent. With one flat-car as a basis, he could start the battery for Fort Sill. When General Wood arrived, even Paul was at a loss how to get the dope, but Al Bellinger suggested in a true collegian spirit that some high-private go up in front of Officers' row and yell, "Oh, General Wood!"

Then those inspections! It is easy to learn the tricks of the regular Saturday inspection, but our troubles came in mounted inspections, dismounted inspections, guard inspections, medical inspections by Frank O'Neill, and in waiting lined up for paymasters, who failed to appear.

"Who's there?" challenged Knight Woolley, on guard at the sick-stables, realizing he was in for an inspection. "Friends," responded a voice from a knot of men in the dark. "Advance one to be recognized," ordered Knight gruffly, and after some difficulty he recognized his friend as General Wood, who inquired the number of horses in the sick-stables. Knight told him. "What would you do if one of them got sick?" asked the General. "They are all sick, sir," was the prompt reply, and the General left.

All was not hardship in spite of the lengthy schedule. "Of course the cannoneers have the easiest schedules," argued Sid Kelly. "No," said Gunner Hutchins, "for all the drivers do is ride horseback all day." But the B. C. details found pleasures in their botanical researches of the terrain, and Tom Cowles, Eddie Crossman, and Don Green always enjoyed blueberries for supper. Daily, after retreat, there was a rush for front row seats at guard mounting, for what greater amusement was there than to see and hear Lieutenant Dickenson show Corporal Sudler six times how to dress his squad, and say in a military manner: "Sir, the detail is correct"?

A few fortunes were made on the side. Ray Potter did a good business in tobacco, and Doc Wiley is going through Senior year on what he made in leather leggins. Jarve Offutt, the B Battery Q. M., will be wearing O. D. shirts and shoes for years to come.

Sunday, especially, was a day of pleasure—that is, when you weren't on a detail—and laws of the "probability of error" said that all horses died Saturday night. This was an organization in which every noncommissioned private had his own car, and Tobyhanna on week-ends looked like the parking space outside the Bowl on the day of the Yale touchdown against Harvard.

Desolate as Tobyhanna was, its roads led to places of attraction. Scranton was put on the map by Yale, and Stroudsburg gave Henry Carter appendicitis. But Buck Hill Falls held special attractions for George Shutt and Moon Murray, who, making more haste than speed, turned turtle in the ditch, and, marching the rest of the way home, arrived in time to report for sick-call. Whoever has ridden to Pocono Manor with Jack Stanton in the C Battery Ford, with a clutch that slipped, lights that wouldn't light, and brakes that wouldn't hold, realized that he had some attraction there, doing the six miles in nine minutes, mostly through the air.

Having passed successfully through the wrangling debates wherein Sam Duryee (and the memorable speech of Cleve Frost) carried the house by 200 to 194 votes in favor of Mexico, this matter was dropped until later in August. Then came the out-of-the-army-by-September rumor, and with it an order, prohibiting any more college men from applying for discharges. This out-doped Dink himself, and Henry Isham made plans for his successor on the News; while not even his promotion from horse-holder to muleteer could cheer Charlie Stewart. Tent-stoves and lumber for floors had arrived; the prisoners had started covering the water pipes; we were in for the winter. Then service practice began. This was the real thing and was worth the disagreeable training duties of the past two months.

"Targets very easy," said Captain Rehkopf, in charge of B's firing from Hill No. 13. Everyone declared he could see them plainly, and Scout No. 2, Mallon, having concealed the B. C. telescope from air craft by tying bouquets on the tripod, said he could see all four sections of the hostile battery, which, as the range party later reported, had all blown down.

Then in the middle of September, just as Assistant Mechanic Phillips had the D Battery store-wagon ready for a hike, arrived the orders to move at once to Niantic. During the following week, as the tents were struck, it was not without some sadness that we looked at the bare camp-site—the place where we had spent such a summer of work and, at times, play together. On the campus one can see a man daily and not know him; but one cannot sleep in a tent with a man, wear the same clothes and eat the same food, without getting to know him, and, in many cases, forming a lasting friendship with him.

The final period of our enlistment was spent in the arctic of Niantic. How homesick for the rocks of Tobyhanna we were in this county-fair grounds with its great exhibit halls for mess! For a week we played a game with the War Department; the object was to be mustered out in six days; if the Government could hold us longer, it won. Here it was we learned how to be efficient crooks: if one battery was short a meat-cutter or a locking-bolt-split-pin, there were three other batteries. When C was lacking one lantern, Sergeant Goodall told this to four men and, presto! he was in possession of three extra lanterns. Again, a battery was minus a wheelbarrow; the Q. M. wouldn't accept money for it, as that would be too easy and we might get away too soon. A faithful corporal then searched the junkyards of New London and returned with a wornout affair that wouldn't wheel, but he had a spare wheel, too. They painted it O. D. over the rust and the Q. M. accepted it.

Typewriters were pounding all night in those candle-lighted, cold mess-halls—cold, indeed, were the nights, for those who did sleep couldn't sleep, as Ken O'Brien said, as he ran up and down to keep warm. Then on the eve of B's muster-out, Washington telegraphed for finger-prints. "War Department one up!" quoth Simpson, handing the order to Major Hammond. What with Boards of Survey, "I and I's," Descriptive Lists and Ordnance Returns, the Government was able to keep up for a week. After all corrections had been made on the final pay roll, on which Frank Couch had charged himself with six pitchforks and a set of branding irons, and, after the muster rolls had been completed, we sat about the grassy park where our tents had lately stood, waiting to be paid. And lucrative was the pay, for the dirtier one had been during the summer, the greater was his clothing allowance; rich indeed was he who had eked out the summer in one pair of O. D. pants.

There was something solemn in that last retreat, with the September sunset silhouetting the barn-like storehouses. Then through the stillness rang "The Star-Spangled Banner," and we could not help feeling that the summer, hard and distasteful as it had been, had not been sacrificed in vain. Jubilant as we were to be free again, we thrilled just a bit when Major Hammond mustered us out with, "Your service with the United States Army has ended today."

The rest was over quickly. A hurried march up from the New Haven station, a formation on the darkened and silent Campus, a few words of appreciation by the officers, and—"Dismissed!"

C. C. Day.

A Wordy War

Or, A Battle in the News

May 1

To the Editor of the News.

Dear Sir: I have long viewed with increasing disapprobation a growing tendency, which, if it becomes a custom here at Yale, is likely to undermine our whole social fabric, or as Horace aptly states it, "Homo sapiens." I feel that I am doing the University a service in calling attention to this growing evil; but let me say that this is no publicity scheme on my part; I am not a candidate for any office. What I wish to protest against is the practice of feeding the squirrels on the Campus. Could anything be more fraught with evil? Alas, for Yale if it continues!!! I rise to express my disgust and contempt for those misguided specimens of pusillanimity who would encourage such a ruinous practice. Did not the immortal Doctor Johnson say, "The time is out of joint"? N'est-ce pas? Well, then!!! Out with this evil.

SOCRATES.

May 2

To the Editor of the News.

Dear Sir: Why should I not feed the squirrels if I desire to? Poor little brutes!!! Who save Socrates would not feel pity for them? I for one am not so heartless as to pass them by without tossing them a morsel. I imagine that Socrates is, however!!!! He quotes Horace as saying "homo sapiens." Wrong—all wrong. This well-known proverb is from Cæsar's Commentaries, book three, line 231. Also, everyone knows that Doctor Johnson never said "the time is out of joint." This is a quotation from Huxley's Essay on Biology, page nine, line twelve, footnote 3, a (2). This proves conclusively that Socrates is wrong and that I may feed the squirrels if I choose. Sic transit gloria mundi. Furthermore, I refuse to be called a "misguided specimen of pusillanimity."

APOLLO.

To the Editor of the News.

Dear Sir: Words cannot express my disgust at Apollo's letter. He is so selfish that he would sacrifice the University just for the pleasure he gets from feeding squirrels; prima facie, I maintain that my contention is proved.

SOCRATES.

To the Editor of the News.

Dear Sir: Both Socrates and Apollo are wrong. "Homo sapiens" is a Latin adaptation from the Greek of Homer, and may be found in any of his plays. Moreover, "the time is out of joint" is from Chaucer's "Ode to a Skylark." Sine qua non.

PAN.

May 4

To the Editor of the News.

Dear Sir: A scurrilous nincompoop who signs himself Pan ventured to intrude in an argument between the squirrel-feeder, Apollo, and myself. Cave!!!!!

Socrates, 1918.

To the Editor of the News.

Dear Sir: I will have no interloper named Pan correct my quotations. "L'état, c'est moi!!!!!

Apollo, 1917 S.

To the Editor of the News.

Dear Sir: I do not consider myself bound to defend myself pari passu from the jibes and thrusts of misquoters like Apollo and Socrates. But I do think the question of feeding the squirrels is closely allied with the question of the Honor System. The sooner this question is settled the better.

Pan, 1918.

(At this point the entire University considers itself bound to enter the squabble.)

FRESHMAN YEAR

Freshman year reminds us of a chemical experiment over in Kent Laboratory. There is a vast amount of effervescence, considerable odor, and a loud noise. The resulting compound is the Sophomore, a comparatively innocuous substance. But no offense, Freshmen, no offense! We like to experiment with all the different bottles, ourselves. Mix a little Savin Rock and Republican Hall with two grams of Taft Bar and the effect is delightful to the pioneering spirit. You can get the most remarkable black and blue effects with a few drops of New Haven Police Force—and water bags. But the mysteries of chemistry are profound; danger lurks behind the prosaic chlorines and carbons. There is some kind of combination made of quite a few letters and numbers that should be inhaled in but small quantities if at all, and not then unless you want to die anyway. Now if you are a true Freshman you will try at once to discover this combination.

TAP DAY

On the eighteenth of May eighty men at most were vitally worried as to whether they were to have the fateful "Go to your room!" Yet the event was a class affair, the most important in its history. Forty-five men were made happy; painfully bitter was the disappointment of a few; and the rest? Were they witnesses merely? No, it was a great thing in the lives of all; it was good discipline even for the least; it was better for most than if they had been tapped. For who was there that did not feel the least thrill and experience the smallest introspection, who did not leave the Campus with a smile on his face, but "I'll show them sometime!" in his heart?

DISCHARGED!

The Yale Battalion has passed away. Peace to its ashes! May a loud and long volley of musketry ring out over its grave and may full military honors be accorded the corpse. No one who served with the Batteries last summer is sorry to see the last of them.

There can be little doubt of the fact that the original mistake was made in organizing the Batteries as a part of the Connecticut National Guard; there can be little doubt of the futility of the whole mobilization of the militia, and of the total inadequacy of the militia system and of—lots of other things! There can likewise be no doubt of the fact that the members of the Batteries under command of Colonel Danford in New Haven and in Tobyhanna last summer did their work so creditably that the history of the organization and of the way Yale responded to the President's call, will long be remembered as a glowing chapter of Yale history.

Now, however, is the time to look forward rather than back and to consider what is to be done to continue the work Yale has already so mightily begun for the cause of military preparedness. We are glad to see the Tenth Field Artillery disbanded; we should like to see the whole militia system meet a similar fate, but we should regard it as little short of a catastrophe if the spirit already manifested and the work already actually accomplished in the cause of preparedness at Yale were to go for nothing more than a mere ephemeral outburst of one summer's duration. The best way military training can be continued on a permanent footing at Yale is of course by the organization of a Yale unit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, which the faculty will, we hope, in coöperation with the War Department, speedily see fit to establish.

Victory

We join today with Yale men of every class and every calling to honor those representatives of the University who have achieved the fond ambition of nine years, nine long, sorrowful, yet ever hopeful years,—a football victory over Harvard and a football championship. To Captain Black and the University Football Team we offer our highest praise and warmest congratulations. We do so not merely because they beat Harvard and broke the spell that has become almost a dismal tradition; we do so because they showed Saturday and throughout the season the sort of never-failing, unflinching courage and vigorous, intelligent aggressiveness that are such genuine ingredients of what we call Yale spirit. The visible manifestation of this spirit gave a thrill to every one of the seventy thousand spectators in the Bowl, and a feeling of pride and satisfaction to all who were Yale men.

The game itself showed that the Yale team possessed a mastery of football technique and a thorough knowledge of the game, a driving and fighting power that was invincible against one of the best teams that Yale has ever met, and the old Yale fighting spirit that could not be resisted. The success of the season was due to the members of the team who played the best football they knew and gave all they had, not once, but all the time, and to two additional factors which we feel deserve especial mention.

We refer to the personal leadership of Captain Clinton Rutherford Black, and to the masterful coaching of T. A. D. Jones and his immediate assistants. The former set the members of the squad an example of conscientious and efficient endeavor that inspired them to attain their highest effectiveness. The latter has achieved in a year what it took the eminent coach of the Harvard team four years to accomplish, and by producing a championship team upon a background of one disheartening defeat upon another, has won for himself and for Yale a triumph that will rank high in the annals of American athletics.

The football victory has meant much to Yale men. It represents the realization of the hopes of more than two college generations, and we cannot begin to do justice to the efforts of those who are so largely responsible for bringing it about. We can merely thank them and congratulate them,—captain, coaches, and team,—and tell them again that their efforts, now crowned with success, are sincerely appreciated by the University. In the pæan of victory that has already risen high, there is nothing but praise and congratulations for those sons of Yale whom their Alma Mater delighteth to honor.

Leisure and Books

Amid the hectic hurry of our highly organized extra-curriculum world there stand out, or more frequently, perhaps, there fall back, men who regard their college course not as a race for undergraduate distinction, but as a transition period between the rather necessarily dull secondary school education and the "larger life beyond." One passing a superficial judgment upon this type of man would probably characterize him as the personification of inaction, of passivity, perhaps, than which at Yale, there can be pronounced no more awful anathema. The man to whom we have particular reference, however, not only says unto himself,

> it is enough for me
> Not to be doing but to be but, in his inaction as manifested toward the conventional pursuits which the majority follows with feverish ferocity, lives his life in and yet apart from the rapid currents of undergraduate haste, and directs such energy as is at his command, after he has satisfied the call of the curriculum in the pleasant and leisurely pursuit of culture, not as such (he never calls it by name) but as an ideal, which he quietly seeks to achieve. He feels that his college course gives him the most unique, mayhap the only opportunity, of his life to realize and come into personal touch with the best in the arts and in science, and the most profitable and interesting in the history and politics of the past and the present. He realizes, with an eminent New England scholar and statesman, that "there is a certain period in a man's life when the best thing he can do is to let his mind soak and tan in the vats of literature." He is right in believing: he is courageous beyond the manner of his fellows in putting into practice his belief, that the four years of college is the proper time to indulge in the pursuit of this ideal.

Would that many would do likewise: would that it might be "the thing to do" (if that be the necessary incentive) for men to go to college to study, and to read, and to converse. Would that we might emulate our English college contemporaries to this degree, and let us be thankful there are some among us who are content to give over the easily won laurel of the extra-curriculum world for the harder course of the scholar and the reader, which brings its own reward, though often "late, late in fulfillment." For there is no time in a man's life that he can better spend in reading good books than that consumed during his college course. Few there be that appreciate the truth of this before it is too late, and fewer that, having found it out, have the courage of their convictions. Let the man who does by the force of his example lead others to see through his eyes. Let his kind increase among us, provided his disciples to begin with are fully aware of the fact that there lies a vast difference between passivity and well-directed ease,—between laziness and leisure.

The Campus in Vacation

How strangely still and silent is this place
 So full of life a little while ago.
 The endless throngs that hurry to and fro
Or walk at leisure with a gentle pace
Are gone and leave not one familiar face.
 There stand, where vivid life is wont to glow,
 Only the quiet buildings in the snow
Touched by the sun with pathos and with grace.
 Are they then merely dead insensate shells,
 These buildings, hung with ivy by the years,
 Along whose empty walls the sun shines pale?
 Ah, no! of all the life that in them dwells
 Some vital essence in themselves inheres,
 Some shadow of the spirit we call Yale.

Return

A sudden starting from uneasy sleep—
 The sodden sense of petulance and pain—
 The furtive hesitation of the train—
The final jerky stop—the frantic leap
Upon a car—the baggage in a heap—
 The crowded journey through the sullen rain—
 The hurried disembarking once again
Where Osborn Hall her silent watch doth keep.—
 And then I tread on sacred ground once more
 And thrill to find it still the very same
 From paving stones to graceful elms above.
 And then I open many a well-known door
 To hear the familiar voices speak my name
 And see again the faces that I love.

STATISTICS

MISCELLANEOUS

How the Class Thinks

The questions on the statistical blanks which were designed to show how the Class thinks brought forth a great variety of answers. This was especially evident in the vote on Yale's Greatest Need.

The most crying need, however, is strongly emphasized by the fact that one hundred and forty-eight men voted for new dormitories. Many votes were qualified, urging especially better rooming facilities for Freshmen. There were also appeals for more classrooms, a bigger Campus, and a consistent type of architecture. One Senior would like to see "more sleeping dormitories."

No other need approaches that of more adequate sleeping quarters. The next is money, with sixteen votes. There is less dissatisfaction with the Dean's Office this year, only thirteen men calling for a change. More practical and sympathetic instructors are desired by sixteen men, while ten advocate better salaries for instructors. Eight men confine their desires for faculty reform to the Freshman instructors. That Yale democracy is a mere name is the opinion of nine Seniors. A closer union between Ac and Sheff would solve the problem for seven men. Compulsory chapel should be abolished say six men. Five men have caught cold from wet Campus walks and would institute a new drainage system.

Other interesting Yale needs include: moving the college away from New Haven; open fraternity houses; "men in the faculty and undergraduate body"; "abolition of rank hypocracy"; less athletics; more athletics; more championship teams; a firmer union between classes; "a French department"; higher passing standard; new Registrar's Office; new library; "an intellectual aristocracy"; less politics; more sensible

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

REPUBLICANS SURE OF 267 VOTES IN ELECTORAL COLLEGE AT 6.45 A. M.

HUGHES CARRIES NEW YORK.

California Looks Like Hughes, Ohio Wilson—Republicans Carry Connecticut and All New England, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, New Jersey and Pennsylvania—New York City Gives Wilson 50,000 Plurality.

Charles Evans Hughes has been elected twenty-ninth President of the United States. Although returns early endorsed a Republican victory this fact did not become locally known until 1:45 this morning, when The News received word by special telephone connection from the Republican National Headquarters, New York, that Minnesota, a critical State, had gone for Hughes, thus giving the Republican candidate the required number of electoral votes to insure his election. At the time of going to press it was impossible to determine definitely the actual majority the Republican National ticket had polled, as in the Middle West and in some of the Eastern States the vote was extremely close.

The Hughes vote took the lead when the returns first came in. Early in the evening New York gave a Republican majority, followed by Illinois and Pennsylvania. Toward midnight, however, several of the Western States went Democratic, including Colorado, Nebraska, California and Minnesota. Wilson's plurality in New York City was 50,000.

FIRST TEAM PLAYS STRAIGHT FOOTBALL IN HOUR SCRIMMAGE.

COACHES STRESS LINE-CHARGING AND BLOCKING OF SECOND-ARY DEFENSE.

Braden and LeGore Get a Day's Rest—First Team Makes Three Touchdowns Against Third — Callahan at Guard and Moseley at End.

Nearly an hour of hard scrimmaging between the First and Third teams was held on the Bowl yesterday afternoon. The First team took the ball the entire time and was drilled for the most part in ordinary line attacks, emphasis being laid on the charging of the line, and the blocking of the Third team's secondary defense.

The First team backfield consisted of Smith, Carey, Neville and H. Stuart. LeGore and Braden were on the field in football clothes, but were given a day's rest from scrimmage. Braden practiced a few drop-kicks at the close of the afternoon. Jerome was on the field in uniform, for the first time in over a week.

The line was given a hard day's work. Callahan played through the scrimmage at right guard. He appeared to be in good physical condition, though somewhat slow on his feet. Cates was at right tackle, as in Saturday's game with Colgate, and Moseley at left end. The latter displayed again his speed in getting down under kicks, and his hard tackling.

The First team was given the ball on its 29, and five times, each time carrying it down the field, using only entrance requirements; "some 'pep' in the Corporation"; more scholars; less childish rules; more interest in the outside world; less organization; German thoroughness; means of getting together; new system of marks; smaller entering classes; less red tape; more electives first two years; exemption of high stand men from examinations; more Political Science courses; Senior society reform; better fraternity system; greater contact between instructor and student; a spiritual awakening; honor system in examinations; better Modern Language department; introduction of Oxford-Cambridge system; "less caste, fewer snobs, more Christian men"; more Yale spirit; higher standard of morality; "the milk of human kindness in the office"; real men as leaders; a "Yale Union"; a school of diplomacy.

Advice to Freshmen

In its remarks on advice to Freshmen, the Class is decidedly in favor of studying more. About three-quarters of the men gave this as their advice. The necessity of getting a good start is thus strongly brought out. The next most widely supported piece of advice is to engage in extra-curriculum activities, but in almost every case this is qualified by the admonition to go out only for what one likes, or to engage in only one outside activity. The wisdom of four years produced only one other hint that was voted on with any consistency—to be natural. About one-fifth of the Class thought this advice most important.

The rest of the vote on this subject was scattering. A few of the more interesting things are listed below: heel the News; think for yourself; get to know as many of your class as possible; be unselfish; don't take any advice; don't use alcohol; don't choose courses blindly: confer with upperclassmen and instructors; "Be true to yourself"; concentration; give all that is possible to Yale; don't violate traditions; facilitate class unity by wearing a distinctive cap; read more; don't be a hero-worshiper; "mind your own business"; don't loaf; don't heel; develop your own personality; avoid politics; go into the Reserve Officers' Training Corps; have a definite aim; "be both individual and a gentleman"; "keep sober"; follow advice in Freshman Bible; keep out of extra-curriculum work; go to lectures; frequent library; "pray"; "carpe diem."

VOLUME 1. NEW HAVEN, CONN., MONDAY, MAY 15, 1916. NUMBER

TONIGHT, MEN!

CO-OPERATION IN FIRST 1917 CLASS PARTY URGED

MESSAGES FROM NOTABLES COMMEND YALE JUNIOR CLASS AND INITIAL ENTERPRISE.

Miss H. W. Bones, Villa, the Kaiser, Anita Stewart and the Faun Are With Us in Spirit To-night.

The epoch-making party which will be held in the Palm Room of the Taft for the phenomenal Junior Class has excited much interesting comment. Letters have been pouring into its sponsors for the past week. Space and the high price of paper make it imperative that only a few be printed.

Early last week a letter on lovely pink paper came from Miss Helen Woodrow Bones. It reads:

"I think you Juniors are the noblest class-that ever came to Yale. Something tells me that at least forty-five of you will be taken into Senior Societies. My brother, Marrow, joins me in wishing you all the best of luck."

Villa sent the following dispatch from somewhere in Mexico:

"You guys has got it. Don't let the Seniors bunko you into any formal recognition. Give my bloodiest regards to old Frank Brophy and Fred Lathy."

The Kaiser said:

"Germany cannot at present either approve or disapprove of the 1917 Class Party. We are waiting for facts, after which we will doubtless make a statement. With sincerest assurances of friendship."

Anita Stewart, not content with a letter too lengthy and personal to print, telephoned late last night:

"Hello! Give the boys my most winsome greetings. It's deliciously green and sweet down here on Long Island, but, oh, how I should like to be with you, severally and individually, 'just for to-night!' Kisses."

The Faun of L'Après-Midi d'un Faune wrote:

"Go to it men! It rivals some of my parties. Tear things to pieces and make the sky your limit. Make it a real Bacchanal."—

Here endeth the lesson.

(Special Article by Hattie Harpin.)

My first call on a member of your class was not a howling success. When, in response to his cheery "Come in," I opened the door and stepped into the room, he took one look at me and dived out of the window. As he "panes"- takingly went through the aperture he howled, "Just because I got stung once in New York is no sign you women can work that game on me all the time." His name was Simpson.

O. B. Cunningham and His Hello Girl at the Hibernian Ball.

Pres Bush was so different! He promptly knocked the ashes out of his class pipe, took off his "Y" hat (aren't they becoming?), and motioned me to a chair. I asked him how he liked Yale. He smiled that roguish, seductive smile of his and after clearing his throat began:

"My dear young lady, what Yale needs is more uplift, intellectual and spiritual, from her leaders—from the men who by their fearless and staunch loyalty have earned the position of leadership so coveted in our undergraduate life—a life of untold possibilities, alas, so often squandered. Now, I intend to—By the way, have you ever heard me sing?"

SIGHT SEEING HIGH STREET TOUR AUTHENTICALLY DESCRIBED

NEW BUILDING'S ARCHITECTURE "DELIGHTFULLY GOTHIC," SAY JUNIORS AFTER EXCITING TRIP.

Mystery Shrouds Structure — View of New Haven and Environs Too Lovely For Words.

In order to clear up once and for all any erroneous ideas about the pre-season tour of certain notorious High Street property, the following statement is issued:

"Late in April, we three boys inspected and approved in behalf of the University and ourselves, the new building in back of the Kent Lab. and Old Sloane, and other buildings. When completed, we feel sure it will make a nice place, so delightfully Gothic it is.

"Every room will have a fireplace, hot and cold water, and an ash-tray. Rooms facing the east will have the morning sun, those, the west, the afternoon. From the turrets, one gets an excellent view of New Haven and environs. The Winchester Works look splendid, so does Red Elkin.

"One thing puzzled us. We could not imagine who or what is going to use the building. It hardly seems fitted for class-room work, but would, we are convinced, make an excellent dormitory. It is far enough from the street to keep the students free from MacAdam Minnies' siren-like entreaties. It would also make a good laboratory for students of architecture to work in and—go.

"All in all, it is a very satisfactory structure. We hope you boys will like it.

PLEASANT OLD DIRECTORS HOLD JOLLY MEETING FOR MAKING PLANS.

Engineer Climbs Into Cab With Pansy in Buttonhole—Whistle Goes "Toot! Toot!"

"Just the day for a wreck," said the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad; and "Agreed!" cried all the directors with one voice.

"Who shall be the guilty engineer?" said one of the pleasant old directors, rubbing his hands cheerfully. "For there must always be one of those; we shouldn't want to take the credit ourselves, should we, my dears?" he asked genially.

"Oh, no!" cried all the merry directors.

So it was decided that old Mr. Doddy should take this week, for he was very old, and just a little blind and was really getting quite deaf. This is the way you see, by which the New Haven road avoids a pension list and keeps its old engineers from suffering the annoying embarrassments of the poorhouse in their old age.

So dear old Mr. Doddy climbed into the cab with a pansy in his buttonhole that his little great-great granddaughter had given him, and all the little boys and girls with their mamas and papas and grandmamas and grandpapas and uncles and aunties climbed in the pretty little wooden cars behind the engine.

"Toot! Toot!" went the whistle, and everybody waved their hands, and dear old Mr. Doddy smiled and smiled, though he couldn't see very clearly what he was smiling at, for he had two big cataracts on his nice old eyes. Then away they went, and everyone laughed because they were going so fast and they might get in on time and surprise all their friends. But now they were

BIG CLASS PARTY STARTS TONIGHT AT 8.45 SHARP

AMUSEMENTS OF ALL SORTS AND DIVERS REFRESHMENTS FURNISHED.

"Plantation Days," That Boy" Quartette, and Ambrose to Afford Entertainment.

Well, boys—

The day we have lived for is here at last, and to-night the biggest party of our be-partied lives takes place. It is going to be held in the Palm Room of the Hotel Taft at 8.45 sharp. Those who cannot arrive until 9 will, however, only miss the preliminary rounds, and can easily catch up with the rest.

The party is strictly—not necessarily purely—a class affair. It has been gotten up entirely by Juniors, and entirely for Juniors. It is not meant for any group or groups within the Class of 1917, but for the whole and entire class.

Amusement will be the pièce de résistance, and will be afforded by a dazzling array of talent. Stars from all quarters of the class have offered their services, and one may expect to see a veritable constellation on the monster stage that the Taft has erected at great expense. Variety will, of course, be the keynote of the program.

"Plantation Days," staged by Ned Chilton, with scenery and costumes from the studios of Shorty O'Brien, is the big number. Ned has issue mimeographed reports to the effect that the number will "carry you back in memory to the days you used to loll around in the cotton fields, and get moony on moonshine." He says he has inserted some jokes that no other white man has ever dared to put on the stage.

When the heat of the cotton field becomes oppressive, "That Boy" Quartette will endeavor to provide an oasis of melody. The men on it are too well known to need personal mention, and have often sung on the Campus at all hours of the night. They have promised to have some funny stuff on tap for to-night.

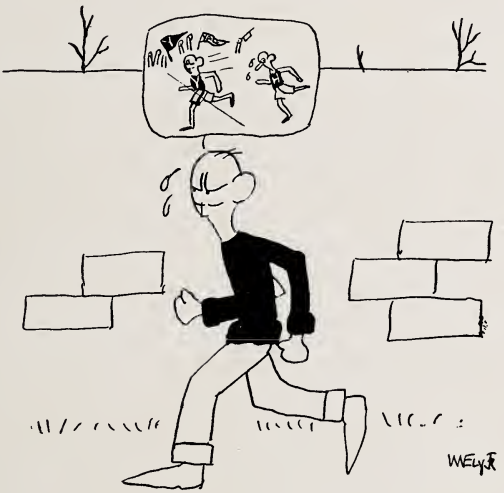

The third headliner will be Ambrose the Famous Trained Horse. He has appeared before all the crowned heads of Europe, and has always behaved like a good horse. He is the greatest equine mathematician in the world and will solve some nutty problems. His trainer S. W. Burke, recently refused to take $1,000,000 for Ambrose.

And shrimp it all refreshments will be served.

A QUARTER
25 CENTS
WILL BE COLLECTED FROM EVERY MAN AT THE DOOR THIS EVENING

Greatest Regret of College

Strange as it may seem, the greatest regret of the Class is consistent with its advice to Freshmen. Not having paid strict attention to the curriculum is a source of sorrow to most men. Not far behind it is the failure to take part in extra-curriculum activities. All of the deepest regrets seem to concern intellectual matters, as shown by a heavy vote on not having gone to more lectures and concerts; not having tried for Phi Beta Kappa; having taken poor courses; having studied so little Freshman year; and having read so little. In keeping with this, is the large number of men who put down "wasted opportunities."

Other regrets of the Class include: having come from a small preparatory school; not having mixed with more men; not winning a "Y"; rooming in Pierson; lack of intimacy with instructors; not having taken more part in athletics; having had no definite aim in college; not having made a Senior society; having studied too much Freshman year; not having heeled the News and Lit; not having taken part in religious work; not having met Bobbie Fisher.

Most Valuable Thing Obtained from College

To have made friends seems to be the traditional most valuable thing obtained from college. The Class gave ninety-two votes to this. The next most valuable thing was a broader outlook on life, with forty-three votes. Social experience was considered worth the most by thirty-three men, while fourteen prize their ability to appreciate men. Only eleven believe their education to be the greatest asset of Yale life.

The following received more than five votes each: associations; confidence; toleration; sense of ignorance; concentration; sense of proportion; learning how to think independently; and forming the habit of reading good books.

Among other benefits derived from Yale may be listed: mental discipline; ability to study; cynicism; value of hard knocks; mental awakening; love of study; ability to speak in public; making the News; conceit; Yale degree; tenacity; patience; character development; self-control; accuracy; good times; indifference; and inspiration.

On Creating a Deeper Interest in Scholarship

The average attitude on creating a deeper interest in scholarship at Yale is that it is impossible. Such a thing, says the Class, cannot be created—it must be spontaneous. Some suggestions, however, are offered, the most emphatic of which calls for better instructors, especially during Freshman and Sophomore years. Exemption from examinations for high stand men and freer choice of electives are tied for second place. Some advise giving more prizes and honors for work well done. A closer union between instructor and student is another solution. A goodly number want to cut down on athletic and other extra-curriculum activities.

The great majority of the Class voted for one of the above ideas, although there are some other views on the subject. They include the following: smaller classes; abolition of the cut system; a higher passing standard; shorter assignments; more publicity of marks; more debating; elimination of Phi Beta Kappa; abolition of Senior societies; and awarding "Y's" to the fifteen men with the highest stands.

Fraternity Reform

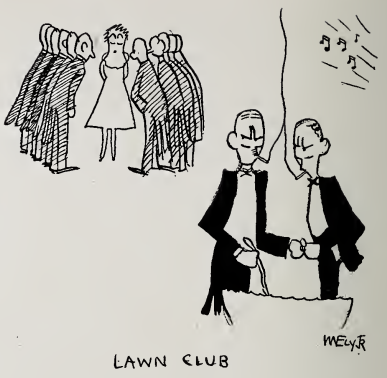

The vote on fraternity reform was heavy and practical. Influenced perhaps by the recent open house agitation, ninety-four men declared this to be the logical solution of the problem. The opinion that there are not enough fraternities at Yale is held by thirty-eight men, who would institute new chapters here. Thirty-seven fellows are for leaving things as they are now. Twelve men would do away with fraternities altogether.

Numerous other suggestions were offered, among which are the following: a more practical campaign agreement; more interfraternity activity; less aristocracy; higher moral standards; cut out carnations; elections based on congeniality; closed house; take men Freshman year; get away from preparatory school grip; less secrecy; fewer fraternities; break away from national fraternities; and do away with politics.

Sailing

Society Reform

The vote on Senior society reform was not so heavy. The most widely supported view is to leave them alone. Fifty-five men advise this. A new system of elections, whereby men are chosen solely for merit, is desired by seventeen. Abolition is favored by ten men, and the same number want to do away with "packing." Nine men would do away with the secrecy, one man further urging cutting out "the bugaboo stuff." Increase of membership in each is suggested by eight men, while one man would limit the total membership to thirty.

Miscellaneous Vote
